

In the house constitutes a majority of one. The total membership is 615.

F. W. Jowett, first commissioner of works and a member of Premier MacDonald's cabinet, was defeated at Bradford. He is the second important labor casualty. Margaret Bondfield was the first. Results of MacDonald's, David Lloyd-George's and Winston Churchill's fights have not been announced.

Cabinet Meeting Friday.

Premier MacDonald has summoned the cabinet to meet Friday to discuss the results of the election and to begin an investigation of all the circumstances of the Zinoviev letter, which changed the color of the British campaign from whatever it was to a bright red.

It has been labor's intention to meet the new house, which meets on November 18, and to present a statement of future policy. It then will be the privilege of the conservative party to vote MacDonald from office. The socialist ministers will resign. King George will ask Stanley Baldwin to form a new cabinet and will be back on the even keel of conservatism after nine months of unbalanced socialist-ministry rule.

Asquith Goes Down.

Asquith was the major election casualty of the early returns. Arthur Henderson, Stephen Walsh and H. C. Clynes, three important members of the socialist cabinet, were elected, and reports on other ministers were still to be had.

Lady Astor, the American woman who was the first of her sex to sit in the English parliament, won her Plymouth division for the third consecutive time. Lady Astor was the second woman to succeed in the present election. The first was Miss E. Wilkinson, who won a former liberal seat for labor.

Austen Chamberlain, the tall, dignified, monocled English gentleman, who typifies conservatism in its most conservative aspect, was re-elected by his Birmingham constituency.

Young Baldwin Defeated.

Young Oliver Baldwin, the socialist son of the former conservative premier, was defeated, but he polled 10,314 votes in the Dudley division where a labor candidate in 1923 obtained only 1,117. MacDonald has a son, a candidate, and a nephew, Arthur Henderson's boys, Will and Arthur, Jr., sought reelection, but were defeated.

The last party deals whereby liberal or conservative candidates withdrew to permit a straight fight to a laborer seem to have been fought to liberalism. Both conservatives and labor candidates to gain votes and the gains were chiefly at the expense of the middle-of-the-road liberals.

CONSERVATIVES GAINED FROM FIRST RETURNS.

London, October 29.—The conservative registered gains from the first results returned, all three seats at Salford being conservative gains.

The first announcement of a labor victory was at Salford, where the elected was Arthur Henderson, secretary for home affairs. The first labor leader whose defeat was announced was Ben Tillett, in a triangular contest for Salford, North. Henderson's victory was heavily reduced as compared with the last election, but that was due to the intervention of a liberal candidate, making it triangular.

J. Potts, labor candidate, won in Barnsley, despite the fact that the conservative candidate retired to leave a straight fight between the liberals and laborites, but the labor majority was reduced from 5,790 in the last election to 533.

Asquith Is Defeated.

Former Premier Herbert Asquith went down to defeat along with many of his followers. It had been intimated in the campaign that Mr. Asquith were defeated in this election, he would retire from politics.

Mr. Asquith was opposed by the laborite, E. R. Mitchell. The figures were: Mitchell, labor, 17,067; Asquith, liberal, 14,829. In the previous election Mr. Asquith had a majority of 1,746.

Lady Astor won a striking victory over her labor opponent. Her majority was increased from 2,676 to 5,079.

Lady Astor, conservative, 18,174; Captain W. G. Brennan, labor, 13,095. The minister of education, Charles P. Trevelyan, was re-elected for New Castle-on-Tyne. His majority was reduced from 1,187 to 896.

Austen Chamberlain Re-elected.

Austen Chamberlain was re-elected for the west division of Birmingham. Sir Hamar Greenwood, a constitutionalist, former chief secretary for Ireland, was elected. He polled 11,312 against J. G. Hale, labor, 8,246 and P. H. Heffer, liberal, 3,745.

The laborite secretary of the air ministry, William Leach, was defeated, polling 10,652 against the conservative, Lieutenant A. Gads, 17,854, a conservative gain.

Arthur Ponsonby, subsecretary of foreign affairs, was re-elected for the Brighton division of Sheffield.

The conservatives gained one of the two seats for Derby, where J. H. Thomas, the colonial secretary, also was re-elected. This was effected by a score for the conservatives, as Derby had always been consistently liberal or labor.

Oxford Turns Conservative.

The university town of Oxford, which in the last election displayed strong liberal tendencies, seems likely to revert to its former conservative leanings. The famous oarsman, Captain K. G. Bonar Law, conservative, who wrested the seat from the liberals at a by-election in June, has retained the seat with a largely increased majority.

The polling, as expected, proved much heavier than in the last election. The first woman elected is a new accession to the house of commons, Miss E. Wilkinson, national organizer for the National Union of Distributive and Allied Workers, and a representative to the Manchester city council.

J. A. Parkinson, a member of the government, being controller of the king's household, was re-elected.

Conservative Majorities Increase.

A striking feature of the election was the great increases in the conservative majorities almost everywhere, even when the representation was not changed. Thus Brig. Gen. H. Page Croft, at Bournemouth, increased his majority from 6,250 to 12,885. His unsuccessful opponent was a woman laborite, Minnie Fallister.

Sir E. M. W. Grigg, who was one of the candidates elected from Oldham, was formerly Mr. Lloyd George's secretary.

The story from Manchester is of the conservatives regaining seats lost to the liberals at the last election.

The first communist elected to the new parliament was S. Saklatvala, who defeated the liberal member, H. Hogbin, his conqueror in the last election.

War Minister Re-elected.

The labor war minister, Stephen Walsh, was re-elected for the Ince division of Lancashire, with 18,272. His conservative opponent, Gabriel, polled 7,870.

Lady Diana Manners' husband, Major A. Duff Cooper, conservative, won another victory for his party in the Oldham district. The vote: Duff Cooper, conservative, 37,419; Sir Edward Grigg, liberal, 26,761; W. J. Tont, labor, 23,623; J. Wilson, labor, 22,081.

Oliver Baldwin, the laborite son of former Premier Stanley Baldwin, was beaten in Dudley by the conservative, C. E. Lloyd. The vote was Lloyd, 11,190; Baldwin, 10,314.

Swing to Conservatives.

The heaviest swing to conservatism in the early returns came from the industrial north and the midlands. The conservatives captured seven of the ten Manchester seats, only one of which they occupied in the last parliament. They scored further triumphs in New Castle, Northampton, Nottingham and other great manufacturing centers in London and its suburbs.

The party made still further gains in many places, and where the laborites held some constituencies, they did so with decreased majorities, while the trend back to Toryism was marked with heavier majorities than heretofore in constituencies that almost always elect conservatives.

Liberals Lose Everywhere.

The liberals lost all along the line. Manchester and Liverpool turned strongly from them to the conservative fold, while laborites ousted other liberals.

The defeat of Miss Margaret Bondfield removes from parliament a woman to be appointed to a ministerial position in the British government, acting as parliamentary secretary for the ministry of labor since her election in 1923. She was chairman of the trades union congress and also had the distinction of being the first woman to hold that important position in the British industrial world.

MAJOR GENERAL HAAN BURIED IN ARLINGTON

Washington, October 29.—Another wartime leader was laid to rest in Arlington National cemetery today when the body of Major General William G. Haan, who commanded the Thirty-Second division in France, was interred with full military honors.

High officers of the war department, who were his comrades in the long years of his military service, attended the ceremony in full uniform and men from Michigan and Wisconsin, who were wartime officers of the Thirty-Second division, acted as honorary pallbearers.

CANADIAN BANDIT HAD SAW IN HEEL WHEN EXECUTED

Montreal, October 29.—When Giuseppe Serafini, youngest of the four Hochelaga bank bandits, hanged here last Friday, walked to the scaffold, he carried in the sole of his left shoe three slender steel saws, it became known today. The saws were discovered when the Italian's footwear was examined after his body had been cut down. Several weeks before the quadruple executions, Serafini escaped from the death cell and reached the prison yard, where he was caught.

COOLIDGE, HUGHES RAPED BY DAVIS

"Belittle" the conference, but "rather to clear the public mind of the gross exaggerations with which political ardor has intentionally surrounded its results."

"Surely Mr. Hughes must know," the candidate added at this point, "that of the four major treaties to which the United States has been a party, the only one which dealt with the use of submarines and noxious gases in warfare and with territorial integrity in China and the open door are his part in the negotiation of the failure to this date of France to ratify the same."

Let Naval Ratio Drop.

Mr. Davis called attention to the naval treaty, pointing out in that connection that "our present naval ratio with reference to Great Britain has been stated by the secretary of the navy himself to be no better than that of four to five, while those naval experts insist that it is no better than two or two and one-half to five."

"Whatever may rightfully be said in praise of the president's conference as a beginning," Mr. Davis said, "it is impossible to escape the conclusion that if we are to go no further in our part in the negotiation of a world peace, the most unfortunate ending, if the peace of the world is to rest in the future as it has done in the past upon force, if each nation is to rely upon protection upon its weight of armament, then as a result of this Washington conference our security has been made unquestionably less secure. Unless we are willing to press on and end our aid to the cause of general disarmament and the upbuilding of world opinion and international arbitration as a substitute for force, it might well have been better for us had we never made this initial advance."

Raps Hughes on League.

"If only less happy is the secretary when he comes to interpret the meaning of the democratic platform on the subject of international relations and the league. Having in mind previous efforts of the president to secure ratification of party platforms, one may be pardoned a certain skepticism as to his skill as an interpreter. It was in 1920 that Mr. Hughes and the distinguished republicans took upon themselves the burden of assuring the country that the republican platform meant something. Subsequent history has shown that that assurance was not nothing at all. Now he tells us that the democratic platform for 1924 means nothing. Can one be surprised if he were again?"

"If he will spend the necessary time to re-read the democratic platform he will find there a declared purpose to lift, if possible, the great question of America's relation to the league of nations out of the quagmire of party politics and to give the American people a chance for its own decision on the question of the contents of a political campaign."

Takes League Out of Politics.

"There may be those who, for fancied political advantage, would oppose this purpose, but most Americans, I believe, whether friends or foes of the league itself, regret that because the sport of partisanship, and are eager to raise the question from that plane. No true friend of the league wishes to have the United States enter by trickery or evasion, neither by shoddy nor back door, but, if at all, purely, firmly, in a manner compatible with the dignity of the United States and its standing in the world. They have the promise of the democratic party to this effect and assurance that, pending the coming of that day, we will officially participate in any conference called to deal with world affairs."

Referring to another statement explaining that the administration had abstained from joining the league of nations "mainly for the purpose of avoiding political entanglements and committing ourselves to the assumption of the obligations of others," Mr. Davis said:

Takes Shot at Coolidge.

"Presumably the president meant to intimate that we not only have abstained, but will continue to abstain from the league of nations; and having closed the incident, he has closed his mind and his memory as well, since otherwise he would recall that even were the United States a member, it could be committed to no engagement or assumption of the obligations of others without its affirmative vote and consent. If we abstain mainly for the reasons assigned by the president, it would be interesting to know what other reasons are in his mind, which support these main considerations."

"It cannot be his belief in the fiction that the election of 1924 was a decisive of the question, for this he himself was prompt to disavow before that year had closed. Perhaps they are of the same inflexible character as those that have influenced his secretary of state to abandon his position, so boldly assumed in the famous manifesto of the thirty-one prior to the election under which Mr. Coolidge holds his office."

Hits Coolidge Again.

"The second proposition is the statement that 'under our constitution, we cannot, by treaty, pledge or limit the future action of the congress.' This is news, indeed, and if true, the nations of the world may well hesitate before entering into any agreement with the American government. The Washington conference, which the president praises so highly, agreed that we would not fortify the islands of the Pacific and that we would not increase our tonnage in capital battleships beyond a stated figure. Are we to be told now that these agreements were made in error? Or are we to be told that we are to pledge or limit the future action of the congress? If so, why were they entered into and what did the Washington conference accomplish if these agreements were nothing more than an exchange of polite notes?"

"We have, by way of further illustration, treaties of trade and commerce with nearly all the civilized nations of the world, agreeing not to discriminate against one in favor of the other. Have these treaties no binding effect upon future congresses?"

Most Impotent of Nations.

"Is it true, then, that alone among the nations of the world, the United States can make no covenant relating to the future and that the hundreds of treaties we have made are but scraps of paper? If so, we in truth are the most impotent of nations."

The president's comments upon the world court were challenged by Mr. Davis, who then turned to the announcement made by the chief executive regarding the commitment of the administration "to the policy of international conferences, as specific occasions arise."

"Evidently, without realizing," Mr. Davis said, "the president approaches here the heart of the great problem that lies before the civilized world. That question is no less than this: Shall international conferences continue to be sporadic, exceptional and casual in the intercourse of nations, or shall they be a part of the regular, systematic, organized, day-to-day life of the world? Sporadic conferences have been resorted to as far back as history runs. There is nothing new or promising or hopeful in the offer to continue them. It was the failure to procure just such a conference that broke down the efforts of Sir Edward Grey to avert the coming of a great war in July, 1914."

No Assurance for Future.

"There is no promise from the past in continuing this system, and no assurance for the future. Indeed, all the lessons of history teach its futility. It is the ambition of all forward-looking men to substitute in its place a system of organic, regular and periodic conferences, whose coming together will not depend upon the passing whim of any nation, but which will be part of the ordered life of the world."

In turning to the statement of Mr. Coolidge that he favored constitutional "covenants which would look to the outlawing of aggressive war," Mr. Davis said, "here again definition has run mad."

"What is aggressive war?" he asked. "What are 'constitutional covenants' to outlaw it? Has the president any definition to give of those wars which should be outlawed as aggressive? Where would he draw the line between defense and aggression? What nation can he point to that has ever confessed to the waging of an aggressive war?"

Questions Coolidge.

"Would he be willing to accept the protocol just proposed at Geneva, which makes the test of aggression the unwillingness of a belligerent to submit to preliminary inquiry or arbitration? What does he propose to add, if he adds the thirty or more treaties negotiated by Mr. Bryan, as secretary of state, which had this end in view? How would he square his theory with his earlier declaration that we cannot by treaty pledge or limit the future action of congress? If the congress of the United States, having no power to declare war, cannot be pledged or limited, as he says, by any treaty, how will it fit his point of view to divide wars into classes, limiting congress as to those that it can declare? Will he tell the president to tell us in what manner he proposes to effect his outlawry?"

"If he will not, he will be forced to put it under the ban of some existing law. Where is this law to be built up? How are we to attain it, except by the ratification of the agreements to be regarded, if they do not bind the nations who make them? How does the president propose to retain the absolute discretion of congress, in the face of a recognized international law? Does he think he can ride two horses at the same time, with the same candid consideration that he invokes for himself, that the time must come when the United States cannot continue her pretense of isolation, but must participate with other nations in maintaining a common council of mankind?"

"A candid consideration, addressed to the president's final summary, shows the utter barrenness and futility of the pretense that we have a 'well-defined foreign policy' unless, indeed, that policy is one of pure negation. It is reassuring to be told that 'we have maintained our ancient traditions.' This has a fine, compelling flavor but the tradition of moral leadership can hardly have been among those in the president's mind."

In conclusion, Mr. Davis mentioned references made by President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes in addresses delivered last Thursday relating to tariff, agriculture, the bituminous coal industry, industrial peace, business, commerce and other general subjects.

"The truth is never left without witnesses," Mr. Davis said. "The public mind works slowly; it can be trusted soon or late to weigh extravagant claims and extravagant detraction at their proper worth. The facts will speak. Their only impediment is time."

QUALITY OF MILK 'FAIR' EXPERT SAYS

The quality and purity of Atlanta's milk supply is "only fair," and much work is necessary to make the milk safe for the city's youngsters, according to Leslie C. Frank, milk sanitation expert of the United States public health service. This statement was made Wednesday afternoon at a special meeting of Atlanta's newly organized milk commission.

Mr. Frank will submit no formal report until after completion of the survey of conditions now being made by him. It is expected that his reports will not be submitted to the state board of agriculture until about November 15, and indications are that no definite action will be taken previous to that time. Mr. Frank also will report to the milk commission and that body is expected to make recommendations to city council.

He plans to continue his investigation today, and will leave tonight to make a similar survey in Virginia. He will return to Atlanta early next month to complete his tour.

Sterilization Good
According to facts brought out by Mr. Frank's incomplete survey, certain conditions here are very good, while others are extremely poor. He said members of the commission that dairies inspected to date show that approximately 50 per cent of milk bottles used in Atlanta are steam sterilized. That high figure is especially good, he said.

He stated that no raw milk, including certified milk, which is the highest grade of raw milk, is free from dangerous bacteria and that pasteurized milk, which is practically the only solution. At present the worst quality is all that is pasteurized in most cases.

He told of the various ways in which milk might be made impure, stating that persons carry half of one per cent of all bacteria found in milk. He spoke of milk regulations in various cities of Alabama, emphasizing the importance of chilling the milk before it is sold and of the admirable results obtained from laws in several Alabama cities compelling chilling of milk.

Four Steps Necessary.
Four steps are necessary before Atlanta can have a pasteurization ordinance, he said, which are: deciding the nature which a standard ordinance should be, how it will be passed, how it will be executed, and what its results will be.

There are three qualities of milk for which the ordinance might provide, he explained, including all pasteurized milk, mixing of raw and pasteurized milk and the same mixture with all milk graded. The second, however, would be practically impossible as the two grades would have to be mixed together in a large vat.

Mr. Frank, with Ken Caldwell, city dairy inspector; Henry Bramham, state dairy inspector, and John Balmain, assistant state inspector, will continue the survey today, leaving for Virginia early tonight.

FANNON IS SPEAKER AT CHAMBER FORUM
S. F. Fannon, of the Sherman Service, Inc., production engineers, Wednesday stated to members of the Chamber of Commerce forum at their regular weekly luncheon that the viewpoint of the employee is the most neglected asset in industry, the executive attitude in this respect being collected in smaller profits than could be otherwise obtained.

"Good Will as a Cure for All Ills" was the subject presented by Mr. Fannon. He challenged the wisdom of his auditors in spending too much money in analyzing of plants and equipment, and far too little time and money in trying to understand employees and their viewpoints. "Cooperation between employer and employee to the fullest extent must be maintained in order that a maximum efficiency in conjunction with minimum outlay be obtained and this cannot be accomplished until attention be given to the firm's heaviest investment, the payroll," Mr. Fannon said.

Many of the largest manufacturers have made complete failures in the business world because too much attention was paid to what they deemed was the largest investment of the institution, factory buildings and equipment, he asserted.

A remedy outlined for this advocated securing the viewpoint of the employee, reaching him on the same level so that full cooperation can be obtained and adopt a simple plan of education with attention including economics, management, community life and last but not least, teach true Americanism, the speaker said.

Mr. Fannon has studied labor conditions in many countries and has come much research work in business and industrial conditions.

Mr. Fannon will appear before the Civitan club Friday at its regular weekly luncheon.

At the conclusion of Mr. Fannon's address Wednesday, F. M. Madson, chairman of the board of directors of the Atlanta and Lowry National bank, addressed the meeting and expressed thanks for the visitor's address.

Interest Growing Keener In Elephant Puzzle Game

It is just as expected. The Constitution's great elephant puzzle is creating more interest than any puzzle or word contest ever conducted by this paper.

From the telephone messages and the letters that the contest manager is receiving, it appears that all of Atlanta is interested, and there seems to be just as great interest from the outside districts as in the city.

A well-known Atlanta woman telephoned the contest manager Wednesday, stating that she had just completed her figures and would soon mail her answer in with a 12-months subscription payment, which was given her by a neighbor.

The young woman stated that the whole family was helping her, and that her grandmother was as much interested as she was herself.

Yes, that is just what will happen. Father, mother, brother, sister, and even the mother-in-law—all are interested in the Constitution's elephant puzzle.

There are 30 cash prizes in all to be awarded after the close of the campaign on November 8, 1924. The prize, a worker receives will depend on the closeness of his figures to the correct weight of the elephant submitted and the kind of subscription received with the solution.

A three-months subscription to the daily and Sunday Constitution, $2.50, with the winning answer, will only pay the worker $125, whereas a six-months subscription, $5 sent in with the winning answer, will pay $500.

Don't Delay.
Another thing—do not procrastinate—putting off delivery of your solution may be losing out. It is not advisable to wait until the last day. Something might happen to make you forget it or you may not be in position to send it in at that time.

If you have your solution ready and believe you have it correct, send it in now and avoid the rush on the last day.

By reading rule No. 8 carefully contestants will understand that they can send in the subscription of some one else and have the solution credited in the name of the contestant if so desired; that two six-months subscriptions at $5 each are equal to one year's subscription; that one six-months subscription and two three-months subscriptions, total remittance, $10, are equal to one year's subscription; that four three-months subscriptions at $2.50 each, amounting to $10, are equal to one year's subscription.

BY DETECTIVES
With the identity of the driver of the death car, which Sunday morning killed Mrs. M. W. Moore, at the corner of Pine and Jackson streets, known, police Wednesday night announced intentions of pursuing a most vigorous search on new clues, which they declared will lead to his arrest within the next 10 days.

Police officials refused to explain the difficulties encountered which makes the arrest impossible at present, but intimated that he was in hiding in the city and would be arrested at the opportune moment.

Detectors are working night and day on the case, and, although reluctant to give any information on the various angles in the case, wink knowingly.

HEART DISEASE CURED BY KNIFE

Milwaukee, October 29.—An angina pectoris, "the disease of the business man," in the future can be cured by means of the knife, doctors attending the Tri-State Medical association convention and interstate post-graduate assembly, declared today.

Dr. M. Z. Dandy, associate professor of surgery, Johns Hopkins, declared that experiments to cure the disease by operating have been largely successful. He explained that the disease was caused by overwork, tension of business affairs, and loss of sleep, resulting in high blood pressure.

The operations and their attendant success were performed to remove glands at the base of the brain and certain nerves adjoining arteries, Dr. Dandy said.

Have him take You Down Cellar

When a realtor is showing you a home don't neglect to go down cellar. Look at the furnace carefully, for the kind of a furnace that is in a home indicates the kind of a builder who put up the house.

When you see the Moncrief sign you can be sure of quality materials and fine workmanship throughout, for a builder who spends more money on a Moncrief Furnace in order to insure the finest type of heating equipment will in all probability be as conscientious in his methods in every other building department.

The Moncrief Sign is not only the sign of a fine furnace, it is the sign of a well-built home. Look for it.

Alleged Slayer Hunted 8 Years, Caught in Court

Minneapolis, Minn., October 29.—Apprehension here of William Klatte, alias William Allen, who has been sought throughout the country for more than eight years in connection with a murder at White Plains, N. Y., January 15, 1916, was disclosed today by Floyd B. Olson, county attorney.

Klatte, who is held on a charge of grand larceny, is wanted at White Plains, Mr. Olson said, in connection with the slaying of Grego George, a merchant, the prosecutor added, who was killed at the behest of his wife because she loved another.

The wife, a sister, a woman friend and a New York gunman now are serving terms for the murder.

A note scribbled in pencil and thrust into the county attorney's hand by a woman as he was leaving the court room several months ago resulted in the arrest of Klatte. The note said that Klatte, who was then under arrest under the name of Allen, was wanted for a far more serious crime than you are holding him for.

Police traced the woman writer, and they said she readily related the story of the White Plains murder. Deputies from White Plains arrived today with warrants for Klatte, and immediately started extradition proceedings.

WIFE DEAD, POISONED COFFEE IS SUSPECTED

Carrollton, Miss., October 29.—Mrs. John Shelton is dead and her husband was in a critical condition today at the Shelton home near Bryn Mawr, from the effects, it is believed, of poison. Both became ill after the morning meal yesterday. A chemical analysis has been offered of coffee served at the meal in the possibility that it contained poison. Two other members of the Shelton family who did not partake of the coffee were not affected.

TARIFF COMMISSIONER ANSWERS LA FOLLETTE

Washington, October 29.—Senator La Follette, the independent presidential candidate, was charged with "throwing aside allegations of truth and decency" in a statement tonight by Henry H. Glassie, a member of the tariff commission.

The statement was made in reply to a speech by the presidential candidate in Baltimore Monday night, in which Mr. La Follette made charges that attempts had been made to coerce the tariff commission to prevent lower sugar duties, and in which he said that if Mr. Glassie had not been forced to withdraw from consideration of the duties, the commission still would have been "hanging fire."

Declaring Senator La Follette had sought to convey the impression that he was appointed to the commission in the interest of the Louisiana sugar interests, Mr. Glassie said President Harding himself had suggested the appointment, after the Louisiana senators had urged him for a vacant judicial post.

"In order," he said, "to lend color to his false suggestion, Senator La Follette tries to produce the impression that my wife's interest in a Louisiana sugar plantation was shown up by persons objecting to my participation in the sugar investigation. This is the facts about the interest in the sugar plantation were first made known by me."

Mr. Glassie said he informed the commission of this interest when the question of making a general rule disqualifying commissioners on account of supposed interest was first brought up. He added that Senator La Follette had magnified the amount tenfold, making it $144,000, when in fact it was less than $14,400 in actual value.

FOURTH WORKER DIES FROM GAS POISONING

New York, October 29.—The death toll from the "looney gas" poisoning of workers in the research laboratory of the Bayway (N. J.) plant of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey was increased to four by the death of William Kresge, 29, son of old Elizabeth N. J., in Reconstruction hospital.

Before his death Kresge became so violent that he had to be placed in a strait-jacket. The other victims of the gas, who died, were similarly affected.

Herbert Fuson, also of Elizabeth, is in a critical condition at the hospital. He also has been placed in a strait-jacket. Fifteen other employees are in the same hospital in varying stages of ailment produced by the gas.

Physicians in charge of the patients frankly admitted that they were puzzled by the strange manner in which the gas, meanwhile, thorough investigations are being made into the operation of the research laboratory.

Woodmen's Circle, Maple Grove No. 85, will hold a school of instruction at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Masonic temple in West End, it was announced Wednesday. All members are urged to be present as several matters of importance will be taken up, the announcement read.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.—(adv.)

GEORGIA CHEMISTS IN BRIEF SESSION

Members of the Georgia Chemists' society gathered in Atlanta in informal session Wednesday, devoting the forenoon to a business meeting and the greater part of the afternoon to an inspection of the Coca-Cola plant as guests of Chief Chemist W. P. Heath.

The opportunity to visit the Coca-Cola plant proved to be an exceptional attraction for chemists throughout the state. There were a number of visitors from various Georgia cities and an outpouring of practically every member of the society in Atlanta.

J. S. Brogdon, of Atlanta, president of the state society, presided at the business meeting and headed the group of visitors on the inspection tour.

Mr. Heath conducted the chemists through the plant, making the tour one of vast interest to other members of his profession. A feature of the visit was the opportunity extended by Mr. Heath for a period of questions and answers. Any question regarding the chemical subjects involved in production at the plant were welcomed at this "round-table" discussion.

The visit was brought to a close with a dinner prepared and served in the dining room of the plant. The chemists gathered in Atlanta for a meeting of only one day, with the visit to the Coca-Cola plant as the outstanding feature of the meeting.

Blood!

You will be compelled to admit that the results of S. S. S. are really amazing!

MAN'S GLORY is his strength—yet how few there are who are really as strong as they should be. The blood thins, gets weaker, blood cells wear out—general weakness and a gradual breakdown of the system results. We know there is one thing that puts power in the blood and that is more red-blood-cells! S.S.S. builds them by the million! We know that as blood cells increase in number, blood impurities vanish! But have you ever actually taken advantage of this wonderful fact? Thousands just like you have never thought of it. So-called skin eruptions—pimples, boils, blackheads, eczema all pack up and go when the tide of blood cells begins to roll in. Blood cells are the fighting giants of Nature. S.S.S. is one of the greatest blood cell builders, blood cleansers and body builders, known to us mortals. Here is your opportunity! S.S.S. contains only vegetable medicinal ingredients. Because S.S.S. does build red-blood-cells, it cures rheumatism, builds firm flesh, fills out hollow cheeks, beautifies the complexion, builds you up when you are run-down. Start taking S.S.S. today and get back that power in your blood!

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

DEMOCRATIC SUPPORT ASKED BY GOVERNOR

Calling upon "my friends to go to the polls next Tuesday and there demonstrate their loyalty to the democratic party," Governor Clifford Walker Wednesday issued a statement stressing the need of the active work and heavy vote of Georgia to put John W. Davis in the white house.

The democratic party is the party that preserved the sacred sentiments and traditions of the south, says the statement, and the supremacy of the white race, and is the only party now offering any hope of immediate progressive legislation.

The statement is an urgent appeal to all Georgia democrats not only to vote, but to actively support the party ticket in the national election of Tuesday next.

Governor Walker's statement in full follows:

"As a life-long democrat, proud of its history, admiring its ideals and committed to its principles, I feel that I cannot allow the national election to approach without issuing a special appeal to my fellow democrats in Georgia to allow nothing to prevent their active loyalty in behalf of the national democratic ticket."

"I remind them that the democratic party is not alone the party of our fathers, the party which has preserved the most sacred sentiments and traditions of the south, the party which fanned the flickering flame of freedom in those dark reconstruction days when under the leadership of the carpet bagger and the scoundrel the supremacy of the white race was in danger, but it is the party of present hope for all progressive legislation."

"From the political history of the past we can be assured that it is the only party to which we can look in the future for the preservation of the rights of the common people, the rights of the states and big interests that feed on republican favoritism and protection."

"National conditions are strained perhaps as they have not been in a generation. Frankly, many loyal democrats in Georgia were far from pleased with conditions which existed for days at the democratic national convention, but those who know the story best declare that John W. Davis was absolutely blameless and had no part whatever in the objectionable features of the convention. He is universally recognized as the best-equipped candidate now before the people with a personal and legislative record of fullest sympathy with the masses of the people. I therefore, not only as the nominee of the democratic party for governor, but as a loyal American citizen, earnestly urge my friends to go to the polls next Tuesday and there demonstrate their loyalty to the democratic party."

GEORGIA DAVIS-BRYAN FUND ALMOST $10,000

Georgia's total subscriptions to the democratic national campaign fund are almost up to $10,000, it was announced Wednesday by Victor Allen, state director of finance for the campaign. Subscriptions received during the day exceeded $500, placing the total to date well over the $9,000 mark.

Mr. Allen said advices from National Chairman Shaver and Daniel C. Roper, in the Washington headquarters, described the democratic chances for victory next Tuesday as of the brightest, but admitted the campaign has been handicapped by lack of funds. However, they are hoping subscriptions of loyal democrats from such rock-ribbed party states as Georgia will remove all worry on this score before the week is over.

"Many reports were received Wednesday," said Mr. Allen, "from local committees in the various counties of the state that have been hard at work, and these reflect an increasing interest in the campaign among the people. Of course, all of our local committees have not reported as yet, but those we have received are most encouraging."

"If every democrat in the state could fully realize just how much their contributions to the campaign expenses are appreciated at national headquarters," continued Mr. Allen, "thousands who have so far given nothing would rush to swell the fund."

WAR ON BOOTLEGGERS LAUNCHED BY AGENTS

Every available prohibition agent in Georgia has been called to Atlanta headquarters for the purpose of waging a concerted drive against bootleggers in the city, according to a statement Wednesday by Director Fred D. Dismuke.

The statement was made during the progress of a hearing involving liquor cases before United States Commissioner Joe Abbott. Director Dismuke declared that prohibition law violations in Atlanta have reached intolerable proportions and that he will assume personal charge of the campaign.

R. B. Johnson, operator of a drink stand at 133 Decatur street, was arraigned Wednesday on charges of violating the prohibition law. Officers testified that they entered the establishment and purchased a pint of liquor. When they arrested the seller a woman employee instituted a fist fight, they said, permitting a third party to pour out the contraband stock before officers could escape the onslaught. Johnson was held under bond of $500.

Director Dismuke, an interested spectator at the hearing, told Johnson that he could warn any and all bootleggers that their trade would prove unprofitable in the near future.

BODY OF WALLACE IS LAID TO REST

Des Moines, Iowa, October 29.—(By the Associated Press.)—While all of Des Moines paused reverently in memory of him, the late Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace was buried in Woodland cemetery here today.

Officials of the government in Washington and of the state, with countless friends of the secretary here, were present at the simple services at the Wallace home on Lynde road and at the family plot where the final rites were spoken.

Throughout the morning Mr. Wallace's body lay in state in the rotunda of the state capitol building and several thousand persons of all walks of life filed silently by as a United States soldier, a sailor and a marine held guard over this eminent son. The flag of the nation stood at his head, that of the state at his feet, and heaped high about the inclosure where the casket stood were floral tributes from admirers high and low in the social scale—sent from all parts of the country.

The Rev. W. P. McCormick, of Storm Lake, Iowa, former pastor of the Elmwood Presbyterian church of Des Moines, where the Wallace family worshiped, conducted the services at the home and at the grave. Prayers were offered by the Rev. J. A. Jamieson, of Monmouth, Ill., and the sermon was given by the Rev. Fred Elliott, who spoke of Mr. Wallace's "lasting contributions" to the state and nation.

Secretary of the Interior Work, the personal representative of President Coolidge at the funeral, was an honorary pallbearer, with Senator A. B. Cunnings, Governor Kendall, Acting Secretary Howard S. Gore, of the agricultural department, and State Secretary of Agriculture M. G. Thompson.

The active pallbearers were officials of the national and state agricultural departments and members of the Wallace's Farmers' Union staff publication, of which Mr. Wallace was editor.

As the casket was borne to the grave, the only adornment was a blanket of chrysanthemums from the United States agricultural department.

Among those who attended the funeral, in addition to the government and state officials, were the Hon. J. C. Dill, secretary of agriculture in President Wilson's cabinet; Charles A. Rawson and Clyde L. Herring, republican and democratic national committeemen for Iowa, and James C. Davis, director general of the railroads.

U. D. C. WILL CLEAN UP SOLDIERS' HOME

everything else, effort be made to secure immediately a well-paid physician to visit the home more often than once a week, and a graduate nurse who will be capable of directing proper care of the sick.

"Fifty-two men, who were the gray, have died within the year," Mrs. Perdue said. "What is done can be put off awaiting the action of legislatures after months of investigation, if we are to face our Maker with a clean record, we must take aid to them quickly."

Mrs. Williams speaks. Mrs. E. B. Williams, until recently president of Fulton chapter, of Atlanta, who has given devoted service to the needs of the home, was a speaker before the convention, supporting Mrs. Perdue in her recital of neglect of the sick and giving in addition details which stirred her audience to further interest in the subject.

Mrs. Seidel introduced the motion to recommend the dismissal of Mrs. Card, and spoke in vigorous denunciation of alleged deprivations suffered by the sick despite the ample provisions made by the state for the maintenance of the home.

Mrs. Benson, of Marietta, known and beloved by old Confederates as Regina Rambo, and Miss Maud Rutherford were two other speakers.

who urged forceful efforts to awaken the board of trustees to needs of the home, particularly to alleged lack and deprivations affecting the ill. The entire convention affirmed Mrs. Perdue, asserting "Our highest and most sacred duty is to the veterans."

That the Daughters have every hope of awakening authorities of the home to unfortunate circumstances was a further declaration by Mrs. Perdue, who declared that within two weeks after the first move made by her committee, sick men "actually had night clothing and clean beds."

Consider Other Questions. Although the Soldiers' home and the alleged neglect from which the very feeblest are victims occupied the major part of the convention's attention today it was not the only far-reaching subject brought before the convention.

Miss Mildred Rutherford created a sensation at the morning session by advocating a campaign to have the Georgia room in the Confederate memorial at Richmond, Va., and college a chair of southern history and southern literature.

"The unlimited intellectual resources of the southland are going to waste, the special charm of this broad land of sunshine and flowers is not set forever before the world, because we ourselves do not set a high value upon our possessions," declared Miss Rutherford.

Miss Rutherford will amplify this topic during her address of Thursday evening, always known as "Historical evening," and always featured by a stirring and brilliant address from this leader.

A welcome accomplishment of Wednesday's work was completion of the endowment pledged by the Georgia room in the Confederate memorial at Richmond, Va., and college a chair of southern history and southern literature.

Both have been addressed by delegates to every convention for half a dozen years.

The Blount loving cup, offered by Mrs. Walter Lamar, of Macon, to the chapter bestowing during the past year, the greatest number of crosses of service, was awarded to the chapter in Madison, according to the report of Mrs. Lee Trammell, chairman.

Three crosses of service are awarded men of Confederate lineage, who served in the world war and have been instrumental in many instances in establishing the record of southern patriotism as exhibited in the present generation.

Greetings Are Received.

Telegrams of greeting came to the convention from Mrs. A. H. Dev, president of the New York division; Miss Alice Baxter, past president of the Georgia division, who is at present in New York; George E. Beal, first vice president of the Missouri division; Mrs. Lucy R. D. Ficklen, president Georgia department American Legion auxiliary, and from Charles A. Moran, liaison officer for the veterans of foreign wars of the United States, Greater Atlanta post 390.

This telegram said, "Our organization is composed of men who have fought America's wars on foreign waters and in foreign lands. We count it an honor to number among our members, mothers, sisters and daughters of our comrades who wore the gray."

From Mrs. T. T. Stevens, of Atlanta came greetings and expressions of regret over absence caused by the many duties connected with the entertainment of the Georgia division, of which Mrs. Stevens is president.

Mrs. Stevens invited members of the U. D. C. to attend the federation convention to be held November 11-14. This invitation was emphasized by Mrs. Archibald P. Brantley, president of the Georgia federation and distinguished guest at this convention.

Honor Halldeman. Mrs. J. Fitzpatrick, of Madison, was another distinguished guest, who was accorded a cordial welcome and who called the attention of delegates to the federation, of which she is a past president.

Resolutions of condolence were read to the family of General Halldeman and the convention paused to pay respect to the memory of this Confederate hero.

From Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuler, past president-general of the U. D. C., came a telegram calling attention to the 88th birthday of another past president-general, Mrs. Algenon Sydney Sullivan, who will reach this anniversary November 3, and who lives at 15 West Eleventh street, New York City. Daughters were asked to shower her with post cards of congratulations.

Sandersville is likely to be the next convention town for the Georgia division, as a formal invitation is to be extended from the Sandersville chapter Thursday. Telegrams confirming the welcome awaiting delegates to Sandersville were received from Mrs. William Goodwin, president of the Transylvania club, and Mrs. J. J. Harris, of the Woman's club.

Report was made that 785 markers have been placed on Confederate graves by the U. D. C. during the past year, as just one of the many work put over by the committee on marking historic Georgia, of which Mrs. E. W. Downer Dimmock, of Waycross, is chairman.

The president's report showed a gain of 620 members during the past year, the division now numbering 16,240 members, and emphasizing particularly the attention to be given to efforts connected with the Soldier's Home, the aid to be rendered in completing the Soldiers' home and the unceasing interest to be maintained in historical work.

The social side of Wednesday was a brilliant affair, presided over by a local chapter of the D. A. R. at the Country club and an elaborate reception, which occupied the evening.

The Country club, with its exceptional charm, being admirably in keeping with the beauty of a broad lake and a fine golf course which are within the grounds. Spanish music and salmetto gave a tropical air to the interior and the D. A. R. emblem added to the effectiveness of the scene.

At luncheon in the evening, this was replaced by the U. D. C. colors and flags.

OFFICERS HEAR BIG WINTER DANCE PLANS AT MEETING

A special committee of officers of the 1224 Infantry, Georgia National guard, was authorized Wednesday to proceed with plans for an elaborate dinner-dance to be held during the first week in December.

Action was decided on at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of officers held in the Rainbow room of the Ansley hotel at noon.

Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, who also is commanding officer of the regiment, presided, and heard reports of a number of committees relative to club-room plans, the dance and other matters of particular interest to guardsmen. Colonel James K. Kimbrough, Jr., of Griffin, and Captain R. B. Ems, senior and junior instructors, respectively, of Georgia national guard, attended the luncheon. Thirty officers of the regiment were present.

VISIT OF ACTORS TO WHITE HOUSE

other theatrical angle, with the testimony that he had been approached by a representative of the McCutcheon-Gurston syndicate who had offered him for $50,000 a loan of publicity, including "cracks and gags on the vaudeville stage," movie publicity and other stunts which would boost Senator La Follette's candidacy. He designated the concern as a subsidiary of the Shubert Theatrical company.

This was later denied from New York. Garner said that Al Johnson, John Drew, Charlotte Greenwood and other stage stars who recently breakfasted at the white house were among those the representative of the syndicate said would join in the publicity. He drew a laugh with this one:

"When I saw the names of Al Johnson, John Drew and Charlotte Greenwood in the list of stars at the white house breakfast, I said 'here are my old friends.'"

SECRETARY HUGHES RAP'S OPPOSITION

Buffalo, N. Y., October 29.—Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, in a political address here tonight, alluded to the national first democratic program as "sterile" and declared the La Follette party to be "running away from the platform it so deliberately prepared."

Mr. Hughes named the Washington conference and the Dawes plan as the "greatest contributions to the interest of peace in the recent difficult years."

WOMAN OF FORTY VICTIM OF CONSTIPATION

Mrs. Fannie White of 678 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Almost every morning, for the last five years I suffered with sick headaches, I felt this was due to nervousness, never dreaming that faulty intestinal elimination caused my suffering. I felt wretched, my appetite was gone, I lost interest in preparing my meals, life was not worth living. A few days' treatment of Carter's Little Liver pills worked wonders. They are small, easy to take—no griping—and leave pleasant after effects."

While in this city the party was driven over the city viewing principal sites of interest and later rode to Stone Mountain, where members were shown the progress in the carving of the Confederate memorial.

VETERAN ON HIKE REACHES ATLANTA

Stanley King, world war veteran, accompanied by his faithful companion, a Belgian police dog, also a veteran, arrived in Atlanta Wednesday.

SMILEY KING, and "Dixie Girl," his companion of 25,000-mile hike. Both are veterans of the world war.

On completion of a 25,000-mile hike, following his usual custom, King delivers street lectures relating experiences in his travels and is planning on a visit to Mayor W. A. Sims and Governor Clifford Walker today.

King is a native of Chicago and resided in that city until the outbreak of the war when he enlisted and was sent overseas where he served with the department of criminal investigation. In relating experiences during his stay in Paris he told of an attempt to arrest an outlaw in which encounter he received a knife wound in the lung. After his discharge the wound became more pronounced and it is in the hope of regaining his health that he is making the long hike.

On completion of the hike King intends to settle down in Los Angeles, Cal., and devote his time to writing a story of his war experiences and travels which will be sold for the benefit of disabled veterans, he said.

"Dixie Girl," his dog companion, is always at his heels and readily responds to his master's commands. The dog was engaged in dispatch service between the lines in France and her body bears many scars received through contact with barbed wire entanglements while on dispatch errands. King came into possession of the companion while both were recuperating at St. Nazaire, France. She was being cared for by soldiers at the hospital at that time. King brought her to the States with him and they have been inseparable since.

Ballot Is Simple.

Despite its size however, the ballot is simple and no voter need go astray in voting just as he desires if he follows the printed instructions. In addition to the names of the electors and the candidates of the five parties which have qualified in this state for the presidential race, the candidates for state officers, for supreme court of appeals and superior court judges, and for solicitors general, are on the ballot. In addition there are eight proposed amendments to the state constitution, to be decided by the votes of the people.

The five national parties represented are the democratic, republican, progressive, American and prohibition parties.

In only one state office is there a contest, that for the place of governor. Governor Clifford Walker was unopposed in the primaries as the democratic candidate, but H. Bedinger Baylor is running for the governorship as an independent democrat.

Eight Amendments on Ballot.

Eight amendments to the constitution are placed on the ballot, each having two paragraphs, one "for" and one "against." Thus if the voter wishes to vote in favor of a given amendment, he will scratch the paragraph beginning with "against," and vice versa.

Fulton county is one of the 82 counties in the state using the Australian ballot system, and 50,000 copies of the official ballot were delivered at the ordinary's office Wednesday.

Claude H. Mason, chief deputy in charge of the ordinary's office, said Wednesday that the city polls would be open next Tuesday from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., while the polls in the country districts of the county would open at 8 a. m. and close at 3 p. m.

COMMITTEE REPORTS SPUR CHEST WORKERS

Reports from the special committee assigned to handle the big givers in the Community Chest campaign, which begins next Wednesday, made at a meeting of that committee Wednesday in the office of the Community Chest, indicate a growing interest in the campaign and a better understanding of what it stands for in the community, according to J. S. Kennedy, chairman of the special gifts committee.

While no figures were released, it was stated this committee would be able to announce substantial advance subscriptions when the campaign opens.

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, in the chamber of commerce building, there will be a general meeting of the speakers' committee, of which E. Marvin Underwood is chairman. All speakers and captains of teams who will work in the campaign are urged to be at this meeting. Eugene R. Black and Dr. M. Ashby Jones will be speakers.

REED CHIEF SPEAKER AT SERVICE LUNCHEON

Joe Reed, president of the Reed Tire company, will be the principal speaker Friday at 12:30 o'clock at the regular weekly luncheon of the service committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The luncheon will be in the Chamber building.

PETITION TO REDUCE COTTON COSTS HEARD

The Georgia public service commission Wednesday heard arguments from both sides on a petition of the Georgia Cotton Growers' association and the Atlantic Cotton Growers' association for smaller charges and more uniform regulations of the concentration and reshipment of cotton at various Georgia points. A decision is not expected soon, as the commission expects to study testimony and briefs carefully before deciding.

62 COUNTIES TO VOTE AUSTRALIAN BALLOTS

When Georgia voters go to the polls next Tuesday, in 62 of the 100 counties in the state they will cast their ballots under the Australian ballot system. In the remaining 38 counties the method of voting in voting for several past elections in the state will be followed.

The law adopting the Australian ballot system required that before a county adopted it two successive grand juries were required to vote in favor of the change. Sixty-two counties to date have done so. The official ballot, provided by the state to these counties, samples of which have been sent to all other counties for their guidance in making up their own ballots, contains nearly 150 names. It is three feet in length and nine inches wide—the largest and most important looking ballot ever used at a Georgia election.

Really better than ready-made cough syrup, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much restorative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right to the cause of the cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. Expulsion Slurs Academic Rights, Dr. Fox Declares

The recent action of the governing body of Mercer university in asking for his resignation is branded "a repudiation of the entire principle of academic freedom and an attack on the fundamental Baptist principle of the religious freedom of the individual," by Dr. Henry Fox, former professor of biology at Mercer, in a lengthy statement answering his criticism which was received Wednesday by The Christian Index for publication in its next issue.

This is the first statement coming directly from the deposed professor since the board of trustees asked for his resignation on the grounds that his religious beliefs were at variance with those held by Baptists. His statement contains an attack on the committee for publishing without his "knowledge or consent" his religious beliefs "prepared solely for the personal use of the trustees." He declares that "many people will find it difficult to reconcile this action with the common idea of courtesy."

Sudden Illness FATAL TO ULMER

Benjamin F. Ulmer, branch manager of the Buick Motor company, died early Wednesday morning following an attack of acute indigestion after an active day's work Tuesday and a sales conference during the evening, at which he presided with more than usual enthusiasm.

No symptoms of illness were noted by the family until long after he had retired. The attack was a violent one, and the end came within a very short time.

In the death of Mr. Ulmer, Atlanta has lost one of the most valuable automobile men, and every worthy enterprise has lost one of its most ardent and capable workers.

Mr. Ulmer was born in Savannah 48 years ago. He came to Atlanta in 1913 and soon after joined the sales force of the Atlanta branch of the Buick Motor company. Promotions came steadily during his eleven years with Buick. He held successively the posts of traveling representative, assistant sales manager, sales manager, assistant branch manager and branch manager.

His superlative salesmanship, many a young man with the Buick organization and his dealers has developed into a better salesman through the capable leadership of Mr. Ulmer.

With his numerous other duties, he found time to write a treatise on salesmanship which has probably been more widely read and studied by automobile salesmen than the work of any other man.

Mr. Ulmer began his career with the automobile industry as a salesman for the old White Steamer, and he was at one time connected with the Primo automobile factory in Atlanta.

He was active in automobile association activities, and in civic movements of various kinds. He was head of the Red Cross campaign in 1922 and active in the Community Chest campaign last year.

Since he came to Atlanta, Mr. Ulmer has been a member of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, and took a prominent part in the work of that congregation.

Surviving him are his widow and one daughter, Mrs. C. D. Ashbury, of Atlanta. Funeral services will be held at the residence, 67 East Fourteenth street, this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Dr. Richard Orme Elmer, pastor of North Avenue Presbyterian church, will conduct the services. Interment will be in West View cemetery.

Pallbearers were selected from friends and business associates in Atlanta—Mr. Ulmer, and will include James W. Wilson, E. H. King, A. A. Bush, J. S. Rose, Christian Clarke, D. S. Newton, C. V. Hohenstein and G. O. Black.

quarters, that he had something to do with the delay in a decision by the president on the recommendation of the tariff commission that the sugar tariff be lowered.

Denies Ulterior Intent. Hodges declared this and other "insinuations and innuendoes" which he enumerated were false, and Kirkland then asked him if there was any intention on his part of using the influence his place as treasurer of the republican national committee has given him to intervene with the administration, in the event of the election of President Coolidge, on behalf of the sugar interests.

"Certainly not," Hodges replied. "Not for the sugar interests or any other interests."

"Without intimating that you have any such intention," said Undermyer, "would you be likely to admit it if you entertained such an intention?"

May Need Referee. Kirkland, with trembling voice, declared he wanted to object to such "insinuations" being put out by counsel. He declared the record was full of such insinuations. Mr. Hodges meantime was on his feet and entered his objection. He told Mr. Undermyer that his professional standing was quite as high as that of the New York lawyer.

"And," he added, shaking his fist at Undermyer, "if it isn't settled by a referee, I will go and eat my hat."

"Well, you had better start eating it," retorted Undermyer.

Chairman Borah rapped for order and said such discussions might be interesting, but that they had no relation to the inquiry. Then, as he adjourned the committee until tomorrow, he added, with a smile:

"I think the committee will have to appoint a referee tomorrow."

DR. OWENS PHILTRE TURNS BREW OF WOE

At the Pan-American conference in Atlanta in September, 1924. So he bided his time, and two or three days before the conference was due to open he entered suit in Fulton superior court against Dr. Owens, and placed a garnishment on all moneys of the conference, garnishing each prominent Atlantian, as Colonel Jones, Frank Reynolds and others.

However, Dr. Owens had a large group of distinguished visitors here from sister republics to the south. Prominent government officials of the Latin-American, some came all the way from their homes in the sunny tropics, and others from the embassies of their respective countries, at Washington, D. C.

Atlanta felt complimented that so many prominent government officials of foreign nations would come to attend a conference here. And every-thing seemed to be going smoothly.

The city and county had promised certain financial support to the conference. But they couldn't pay the money to the conference officials, for the treasurer, Dr. Owens, had refused to accept a penny, for it would have gone straight into the keeping of the court for the possible benefit of Mr. John King, of Virginia.

So they elected an assistant treasurer, who was not garnished. Through him, the money collected was used to pay the bills of the conference.

Dr. Owens, his labors ended, had meanwhile left Atlanta.

When the delegates, from Latin America, began to turn in expense accounts, including transportation from far and expensive places, and heavy local hotel bills.

"How could they pay these," the delegates asked. "We aren't expected to pay these. No sir, nothing doing."

"But," said the delegates, "Dr. Owens told us you would."

"He had no authority," rejoined the city.

"Stuffy," said the delegates. "He sent wonderful invitations to us all, including copies of proclamations by the mayor and governor—copies of the grand seal of the state—all in which he said the city would pay all our expenses."

"Sorry," by heck," said the delegates. "Where do we come in? Do you think we'd have come to your conference if we'd known we had to pay our own expenses?"—or words, in Latin-American to that effect.

And there the matter rests. Lovick Fortson, attorney for Mr. King in Virginia, is threatening to slap a traverse garnishment on Pan-American treasury officials in an effort to get the claimed $800 for his client.

The delegates to the Pan-American conference are threatening to take the matter up with the state department at Washington in order to get their trip-to-Atlanta expenses accounted for.

And the city fathers sit tight and say nothing, and Dr. Owens can't be reached for his solution to the problem.

ELECTRICAL SAND CAUSES RAINFALL

out any charge we first charge it with either one and then bring it down by again scattering the oppositely-charged particles, etc.

Stop Lightning, Compel Rain. "These tests have been in some cases in many manifestations. For example, on July 8 at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a frightfully heavy thunderstorm with almost continuous lightning lay to the south of Phillips field over Chesapeake bay. At 2:30 we attacked a small corner of this storm with a quantity of negatively-charged sand—less than 10 pounds—and coincident with its application there was no more lightning and no more thunder. There followed a heavy rain of about four hours' duration. No claim, of course, is made that the rain was caused by us, because it would have rained anyhow, but the rain would have been attended by constant thunder and lightning and the sudden bursts of downpour so familiar to us.

"This experiment was intended to test an opinion expressed by Mr. Edison in an interview in which he was reported to have stated that we should be able to upset the electric charge of a tornado or a cyclone."

"A much better showing could have been made if we had planes that could widely scatter electrified sand at the rate of 100 pounds per minute. With the small planes as they now are, we can release only 30 pounds per minute. The small planes with their light weight are all right for fog and all right for flitting with clouds, and have at least proved beyond doubt that the principle is correct and practicable."

Rain Making Reality. "This method of a celestial epoch has been reached in the affairs of man."

"Commercial rain making now lies within the grasp of man, and he can employ this and one of nature's cheapest commodities, namely common or garden silica at a cost of about 25 cents per ton, which, outside of maintaining the equipment and operating the planes, will be the only charge."

"Two of the larger planes would be quite sufficient to entirely squelch a dense fog covering 117 square miles or more (an area equal to that of the city of London), or a fog covering the city and harbor of New York. The London Chamber of Commerce has estimated the cost to the city of each 24-hour dense fog at 1,000,000 pounds sterling, or about $5,000,000.

"The eastern farmers should not lose sight of the fact that this development is not restricted to the dry or semi-dry sections, since during the past summer the east suffered from lack of rain to a point where, if it had not been timely brought, there

Claims Income From Murdered Mate's Property

Corra Lou Vinson, now serving a life term at the state farm in Milledgeville, following her conviction in the Fulton superior court on the charge of murdering her husband, Dr. W. D. Vinson, will be returned to Atlanta next Monday to testify in a suit she brought against her daughter, Mrs. Pauline Brown, whom she accuses of withholding proceeds from property the convicted woman claims to be her own, inherited from the man she killed.

Mrs. Vinson claims, in her suit, that she gave the deeds to the land to her daughter, as agent, to supervise the property, collect rents, pay off indebtedness, etc., and that Mrs. Brown has now claimed ownership of the property.

Attorney Sam Hewitt, representing Mrs. Vinson, has asked Governor Walker for permission to bring Mrs. Vinson here for this purpose and it is expected that the permission will be granted Thursday, Wednesday, September 23, was not a superior officer, the verbal demurrer on that point also being sustained.

Patrolman Lindsay then asked that the charge of criticizing his superiors be dropped, contending that Councilman J. A. Beall, alleged to have been attacked by Lindsay at the meeting September 23, was not a superior officer, the verbal demurrer on that point also being sustained.

Lindsay faced only two charges when the trial actually began—those of soliciting influence to force a change in his assignment, and of falsifying. In a short statement Attorney Lindsay reviewed his brother's record as a member of the force, stating that he had been connected with the police department for more than 20 years. For six years, he said, Lindsay was either station sergeant or assistant station sergeant, and from September of 1918 until early 1923 was in charge of the identification bureau and established the identification system of stolen goods now in use.

Long Duty Cited. When the office was abolished in 1918, Lindsay was placed on uniform duty, later being placed in the fingerprint department, then made clerk of recorder's court and finally again being assigned to uniform duty.

Captain M. V. Barnett, who attended the meeting at the Fulton street school at which Lindsay made the address, was the first witness called. He stated that Lindsay said he had been discharged behind closed doors and was given no opportunity to state his case. However, he added that when Lindsay was corrected by Councilman Beall, he qualified his original statement saying that he was transferred with a reduction in pay.

Other witnesses—Lieutenant J. H. Shumate, J. L. Moore, W. J. Eche's and W. C. Slate—all of whom were present at the meeting, corroborated Captain Barnett's testimony. Witnesses stated that he "corrected his original statement and all denied that he ever had solicited aid to bring about a reassignment to another watch.

Patrolman I. H. Lindsay, suspended October 1 on charges of violating several rules of the police department, Wednesday night was completely exonerated at a hearing before the police committee of city council, and will return to duty today.

The committee voted to dismiss charges against Lindsay when five witnesses against him failed to introduce sufficient evidence to make a real case, the committee decided. Witnesses for Lindsay were not called to the stand.

Lindsay was suspended in the police shake-up early in October which transferred many members of the department. He was charged with unauthorized activities during the city primary, or violation of rule 84 of the police department. Charges later were substituted accusing him of soliciting assistance of friends in an attempt to influence his reassignment on the force; of conduct unbecoming a member of the department; of stating untruths in an address made at the Fulton street school on September 21, the night before election, and of criticizing the conduct of superior officers.

Note Was Unanimous. Lindsay denied all charges and evidence brought out by five witnesses against him failed to impress the committee, and on motion of Alderman Jesse W. Armistead the case against him was dismissed by unanimous vote. While Lindsay will return to the force today there is a doubt as to whether or not he will receive back pay for the period of his suspension, as another man was put in his place during his suspension.

City Attorney James L. Mayson ruled recently that in such cases the officer is not entitled to back pay. However, it is probable that a special resolution will be introduced in council by some member of the police committee asking that back pay be allowed.

Following removal of the charges a demurrer asking that the case be dismissed was read by Attorney Paul Lindsay, brother of the accused. Councilman Ed H. Inman, chairman of the committee, overruled the demurrer on all but the charge of participating in a political campaign, which was sustained.

Year-Old Boy Killed. Chattanooga, October 23.—Ewing Lowell Green, year-old son of E. Green, of Camp, Tenn., was instantly killed on the Cherokee trail this afternoon when thrown from his father's machine under a heavy truck. Green, descending the mountain and did not see the truck until too late to stop. In an effort to avoid a collision he drove his car into a road roller standing nearby.

Patrolman I. H. Lindsay, suspended October 1 on charges of violating several rules of the police department, Wednesday night was completely exonerated at a hearing before the police committee of city council, and will return to duty today.

The committee voted to dismiss charges against Lindsay when five witnesses against him failed to introduce sufficient evidence to make a real case, the committee decided. Witnesses for Lindsay were not called to the stand.

Lindsay was suspended in the police shake-up early in October which transferred many members of the department. He was charged with unauthorized activities during the city primary, or violation of rule 84 of the police department. Charges later were substituted accusing him of soliciting assistance of friends in an attempt to influence his reassignment on the force; of conduct unbecoming a member of the department; of stating untruths in an address made at the Fulton street school on September 21, the night before election, and of criticizing the conduct of superior officers.

Note Was Unanimous. Lindsay denied all charges and evidence brought out by five witnesses against him failed to impress the committee, and on motion of Alderman Jesse W. Armistead the case against him was dismissed by unanimous vote. While Lindsay will return to the force today there is a doubt as to whether or not he will receive back pay for the period of his suspension, as another man was put in his place during his suspension.

City Attorney James L. Mayson ruled recently that in such cases the officer is not entitled to back pay. However, it is probable that a special resolution will be introduced in council by some member of the police committee asking that back pay be allowed.

Following removal of the charges a demurrer asking that the case be dismissed was read by Attorney Paul Lindsay, brother of the accused. Councilman Ed H. Inman, chairman of the committee, overruled the demurrer on all but the charge of participating in a political campaign, which was sustained.

Patrolman Lindsay then asked that the charge of criticizing his superiors be dropped, contending that Councilman J. A. Beall, alleged to have been attacked by Lindsay at the meeting September 23, was not a superior officer, the verbal demurrer on that point also being sustained.

Lindsay faced only two charges when the trial actually began—those of soliciting influence to force a change in his assignment, and of falsifying. In a short statement Attorney Lindsay reviewed his brother's record as a member of the force, stating that he had been connected with the police department for more than 20 years. For six years, he said, Lindsay was either station sergeant or assistant station sergeant, and from September of 1918 until early 1923 was in charge of the identification bureau and established the identification system of stolen goods now in use.

Long Duty Cited. When the office was abolished in 1918, Lindsay was placed on uniform duty, later being placed in the fingerprint department, then made clerk of recorder's court and finally again being assigned to uniform duty.

Captain M. V. Barnett, who attended the meeting at the Fulton street school at which Lindsay made the address, was the first witness called. He stated that Lindsay said he had been discharged behind closed doors and was given no opportunity to state his case. However, he added that when Lindsay was corrected by Councilman Beall, he qualified his original statement saying that he was transferred with a reduction in pay.

Other witnesses—Lieutenant J. H. Shumate, J. L. Moore, W. J. Eche's and W. C. Slate—all of whom were present at the meeting, corroborated Captain Barnett's testimony. Witnesses stated that he "corrected his original statement and all denied that he ever had solicited aid to bring about a reassignment to another watch.

Grid Scouting Ineffective This Year--Camp

Switching Plays From One Man to Another Often Used By Teams To Foil Opponents

BY WALTER CAMP.
Special Correspondent of The Constitution.

Copyright, 1924.
New York, October 29.—We have heard a great deal about the scouting system in football but something must be happening either to the scouts or to the system, if one may judge of its results. The most startling instance of this is in the case of Girard, of Illinois, the All-American back of last year, who has probably been more scouted than any other man, and yet the Michigan game in the first ten minutes of play, he got the ball in his hands half a dozen times, ran 296 yards and scored four touchdowns. It is said that Yost has scouted Illinois for two weeks and other Michigan scouts had studied him through the season of 1923.

Another illustration is the reverse cross-play of Dartmouth and Yale. It is said, had scouted Dartmouth in practically all her games, and yet this play, a cross-play to Hall, worked nearly every time.

Last year Princeton scouts had been following Notre Dame. Lourie, the former All-American quarterback of Princeton, studying their plays and particularly in the Army game the week before, and yet Notre Dame rolled up over 20 points against Princeton, her plays going like clock-work.

Play May Be Switched.
There are plenty of other instances already this season. One of the difficulties of scouting that has not been reckoned with, however, outside of individual players, is that a play may be switched from one man to another, and the very fact that the opponent has information as to the character of the play, the final recipient of the ball may work to their detriment, because such plays can be crossed. One of the best instances of this back in the old days when Harvard scouts saw Yale's play, known as the Chadwick run, Chadwick going nearly half the length of the field twice against Princeton, and a week later the Harvard team watched Chadwick too closely and the play was switched to Metcalf, who ran 60 yards for a touchdown.

Altogether there seem to be good and bad points about the scouting system.

Another Saturday has shown evidence of what this column called attention to last week, the inability of the majority of the big teams to coordinate their attack when it comes to setting over that goal line from insignificant distances. It can hardly be believed that it is the superhuman efforts of the players and the defense of the heroic stand. Four downs to make a paltry yard or two betokens a weakness in coordination of the attack and a bravado of the attacking side for eleven men all working together not only to aid the attack but to deceive the opponent and all advised by the signal just where the attack is to be made while the opponents do not know how or where the thrust is to come— if I say these eleven men can not advance the ball under such conditions five feet there is something wrong that can be corrected.

Try to Nab Referee.
W. N. Morrie, one of our most prominent football students and officials, sends me from abroad an account of a football match played at North, which winds up with the following paragraph:
"At the close of the match the crowd made a demonstration against the referee, W. J. Llewellyn, whose decisions during the game came in for much criticism. On leaving the ground he was surrounded and attempts were made to assault him, but the players and police rushed to assistance and rescued him and conveyed him first to the grandstand and then to the house of the police superintendent, from where he got to the railway station."

Our good friend, Bill, it will be remembered, has been through some of these experiences and asks me to send it on to Langford.

Those who draw seats near the top of the stadium or bowls in the allotment of tickets for the big game can get a good deal of consolation out of the fact that both Foster Sanford and Bill Roper erect towers just above the top of these seats from which they follow the formations and do the coaching by megaphone. As a matter of fact, it is far easier to diagnose formations, as well as to pick out technical faults, from this position than any other on the field.

Grantland Rice says "football comes closer to expressing the American spirit and the American ideal than any two other games combined." The truth of the matter is that there is no sport so strong in youth as the so-called "gang spirit," which develops in later years into local loyalties as evidenced by the growth of clubs of all kinds—Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions—and is the basis after all for love of community and all-round athlete.

Edgar K. Garbisch, hailing from Washington, Pa., and the star center on the Washington football team, is a remarkable place kicker, and captain of the team, came from the Washington High school where he was captain of his football team, and also a member of the tennis team at West Point, also, which gives one some idea of his versatility.

Another announcement was recently made that Foster Sanford, Jr., the son of the Rutgers coach, has entered Penn. This young man is a big fullback, and a member of the Kent school at Connecticut, and everyone will watch his career with interest.

outfields selected by these voters were as follows:
No. 1—Jamieson, left field; Speaker, center field, and Hooper right field.
No. 2—Jamieson, left field; Speaker, center field, and Cobb, right field.
No. 3—Jamieson, left field; Speaker, center field, and Cobb, right field.
On the last named ballot Ruth was suggested as second choice to Jamieson for left field.

Here is the tabulated vote:
Ruth, 108; Hellman, Detroit, 4; Jamieson, Cleveland, and Cobb, Detroit, 3; Williams, St. Louis; Rice, Washington; Tobin, St. Louis, and Hooper, Chicago, 1 each.

McGraw Picked Young.
Of the experts picking All-American teams this fall, only one—McGraw—placed Young. To do so the Giant manager selected Ruth from right to left field.

The manner in which his comrades in the older league circuit lined up behind Young indicates that McGraw was not far wrong in his choice.

Young's batting record for the season was:
Ab. R. H. Hr. Pct.

VANDY NEXT ON AUBURN SCHEDULE

BY EMMETT SIZEMORE.

Auburn, Ala., October 29.—(Special.)—Tuesday afternoon found the Auburn regulars battering away at the scrub outfit from an offensive position. The first stringers headed by Captain Lawrence pounded heavily at the white-jerseyed outfit and after the scrimmage got under way realized some yardage. After the fray was over the pony backs went in to try their hands at the art of advancing the ball and Allen and Harrison got with several nice gains. Practically all the regular line was replaced as the scrimmage progressed.

Among the Pitts delegation to get to the fray was "Swede" Sitz, veteran tackle who made his first appearance in a scrimmage in ten days or more. The Etowah lad is having his best season this year and his return to the lineup will boost Auburn's stock. "Red" Harkins held down the tackle job, formerly held by Sitz, last Saturday, and proved to be a gallant performer indeed.

Pratt Still Out.
"Hardbo" Pratt remained on the casualty list through Tuesday's workout and for the second day this week did not appear in uniform. As the week's grind progresses the chances of the appearance of the tried and trusted end against the Commodores lessen. Pratt is being doctored by the "rubber" contingent at the gymnasium for a severe charley horse.

Spurgeon Long, scrub team tackle, was promoted to varsity rank effective Wednesday afternoon according to announcement made by the coaches. Long, who tips the beams in the neighborhood of 175, hails from Cullman county, and played fullback on the Winston County High school team at Double Springs.

Alagood and Sheridan are two other members of the squad that are not in shape to don the football outfit. With these exceptions and counting Pratt out Tuesday's scrimmage revealed no injuries more notable than scratches or minor bruises.

The Auburn team will leave the Plains late Thursday afternoon for the Commodore camp and are expected to arrive in Nashville Friday morning in time for a light workout.

PLANS READY FOR TITLE SEEKERS

New York, October 29.—The New York prizefight commission selected six featherweight fighters Wednesday afternoon to battle in an elimination tournament for the featherweight championship which was vacated a few months ago by John P. Dwyer, because he could not make the weight any more. Now nothing remains but to get the six fighters into the ring, and the fight will be as easy as making the sphinx of Egypt tell a line of snappy stories.

Kid Kaplan, of Meriden, Conn., and Danny Kramer, of Philadelphia, both of whom whaled Dundee in the decision, catchweight fights before he abandoned the title, are the two leading nominees in the tournament. The others are Lew Paluso, of Salt Lake City; Jose Lombardo, of Panama; Mike Dundee, of Rock Island, Ill.; and Bobby Garcia, the soldier boxer, of Camp Holabird.

The fighters will be paired by a blind draw from a hat and the first bout of the series will be fought in the Sanguinary Square at Madison Square Garden.

The prizefight commission also thought of getting up an amateur tournament to find the leading nominee for a bout with Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, but the managers of the young fighters, the weights of the day were all so skittish. They wanted high guarantees which no promoter was willing to make.

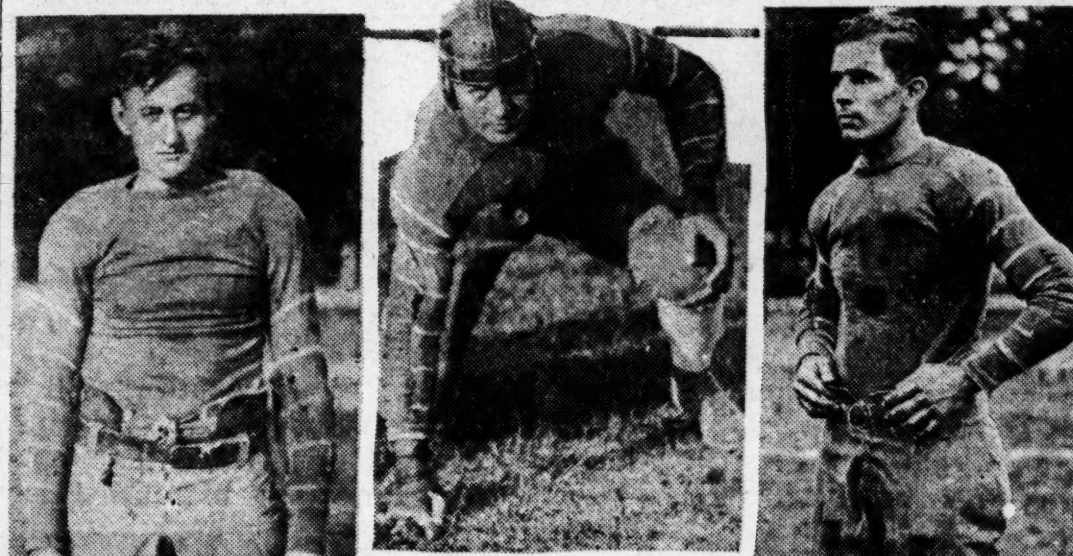

Leonard is now a middleweight and will never again fight as lightweight champion, but he has not yet gone through the formality of resigning his title.

FRISCH PAID $1,200 TAXES
New York, October 29.—Frank Frisch, second baseman and field captain of the New York Giants, is believed to be the highest paid ball player in New York, except Babe Ruth. Frisch paid an income tax of $1,200 last year, according to the government's official returns. His next contract, probably will enable him to pay much more.

Frisch came to the Giants as a recruit infielder with no previous professional experience, in 1919. He was varsity player who had been spotted at Fordham college. John McGraw gave him $5,000 a year for 1919 and 1920 and then gave him a contract for three years at $12,500. Last season he got $18,000 and when his present agreement expires he may get as much as $25,000 a season.

Babe Ruth's pay is reported to be $52,000 a year. Rogers Hornsby, second baseman of the Cardinals and leading swatter of the National league, is said to get $25,000. Ty Cobb, as manager and outfielder of the Detroit Tigers, is one of the best-paid athletes in baseball, but his salary has remained a secret.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR GA. GAME

A special Pullman train to Athens and return for the homecoming celebration at the University and the Georgia-Tennessee football game was announced yesterday by Fred Geisler, assistant passenger traffic agent of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, which is giving a special $2.88 round-trip rate.

The special train will leave the terminal at 10:15 o'clock Saturday morning and reach Athens at 1:25 in the afternoon. Returning it will leave Athens at 6 o'clock, eastern time, Saturday afternoon, and arrive in Atlanta at 7 o'clock, central time.

Tech Has Chance if Irish Take Game Lightly--Staton

BY JOHN STATON.
The Georgia Tech squad, numbering about 30 men and an equal number of camp followers, was to leave this morning for South Bend at 7 o'clock from the Terminal station. Three days ago the Georgia Tech team in their third consecutive game. The contest in 1922 was played on Grant field, and was one of the most spectacular games in the history of football. Tech meets Notre Dame in the third game of the season, and the Irishmen's most notable characteristics.

Wet Field Would Help.
Tech would be greatly aided by a wet field. For, if the ground is soggy, the Irishmen have an opportunity to cope with the Irishmen on muddy nearly equal terms.

Tech undoubtedly will play way over her head Saturday and will put up such a showing that will make every loyal supporter glow with pride. Tech always plays her best when the odds are against her. Tech will show a kind of fight that will last 60 minutes long. And Tech, you may be sure, will play football to the best of her ability.

There's a bare possibility that Notre Dame will win the game too lightly. The game will belong to anybody if the Irishmen have the wrong mental attitude.

Wilton Improving.
Craig Wilton, somewhat recovered from a sickness that has been on him most of the season, was in the lineup yesterday. Though Wilton as yet does not show the snap and drive which characterized his play last season, he is much improved for the season. If he can stay well until Saturday he undoubtedly will give a good account of himself.

The student body and band were out yesterday to cheer their team during the game. About a thousand students assembled in the stands and yelled for the team for an hour. The band was on hand with numerous "Hambly" Wrecks. Wonderful spirit was manifested, and the thought of this backing will make the boys fight all the harder on Saturday.

Will Fight to Score.
Tech has not the passes or the end runs to most of the season's Notre Dame team. Tech's greatest assets upon that field will be her willingness to mix things, and her everlasting fight. Tech can and will fight as hard as Notre Dame. Tech will try as hard to score as Notre Dame, but there is no comparison as to the line ability of the two teams.

People who witnessed the Alabama game were astonished at the speed of Rosenfeld and Brown. People also noticed how easily can Tech's flanks. Now imagine, if you can, four men in a backfield, each one of the four faster, much faster, than either Brown or Rosenfeld. Figure in front of that wonderful backfield a hard-charging, experienced line. Add to that perfect interference on the part of line and backs. With a fair idea

BY BOB MATHERNE.
University, Ala., October 29.—(Special.)—The Crimson Tide of Alabama and the Georgia Bulldogs on Thanksgiving day for the southern conference championship—that's the only thing in this wide world of students at the University of Alabama can talk about today.

"Ole Miss," who is to be played Saturday in Montgomery, is regarded merely as a slight skirmish. Kentucky State, to be played here on "homecoming" day the following Saturday, is apt to prove a thriller, but the Tide-men should win somehow. And the results of the Centre-Alabama game really does not matter in the conference race. So, according to way the Capstones think, it will be Georgia and Alabama.

Kentucky State is expected to give the Crimson more trouble than "Ole Miss" will this Saturday. The Tide-men defeated them last year, but the Wildcats are sending out reports already that they will bear watching. Georgia, however, is such a power in whatever aspirations Alabama may have on the championship crown.

Cooper and Corless Back In Scrimmage Wednesday; Squad Is in Good Shape

BY ROY WHITE.

The Oglethorpe Petrels were sent through one of the hardest scrimmages of the year Wednesday afternoon against the freshmen, with the yearlings using Sewanee Tiger plays, in an effort to get in the best possible shape for the game with the Tigers from Sewanee Saturday afternoon at Ponce de Leon baseball park.

The game will be called at 2 o'clock and tickets are on sale at Marshall & Reynolds.

The scrimmage Wednesday afternoon was the last real scrimmage for the Petrels for this afternoon, a short, light scrimmage will be held with a long signal drill following the scrimmage. Very light work will be on the menu Friday afternoon on the eve of the last football game of the season on home soil for the Petrels.

"Coop" Cooper and Corless, who have been on the injured list for the past week, were back in scrimmaging Wednesday afternoon and will be in good shape for the battle against the Tiger from Tennessee. Both Cooper and Corless were out of the Loyola game last week, but with those two husky lads back in the line, the Petrel defense will be greatly strengthened.

In the scrimmages Tuesday and Wednesday, the Petrel team stressed the defensive play and let the freshmen, using the Sewanee plays, run with the ball practically all the time. The freshmen found difficulty in zipping with the ball, but the freshmen Oglethorpe and the Sewanee Tigers are two different sets of players, with about three years of difference in football knowledge.

Clay Parrish, who has been on the ailing list for several days, is again in the best of shape and his presence in the game will mean much to Oglethorpe. Parrish is one of the best centers in the south, an accurate passer and cool headed under heavy fire.

Brantley Boswell, who played a good game against Georgia Tech in the first game of the season, will not be in the game Saturday afternoon because of the one-year rule and his place will be taken by Redfern or Hambrick.

Heinrich is another of the Petrels. Frank Anderson is counting on to come through with a good game Saturday. Three years ago Hambrick only knew football from the sidelines and grandstands, but during the past three years he has learned enough football to make the Petrels a night-good backfield. His playing Wednesday afternoon was particularly good, especially on backing up the line.

Maurer Ready.
Captain Adrain Maurer, one of the best halfbacks that ever graced a southern gridiron, is in the best of condition and says that he is ready to give Atlanta fans his best Saturday afternoon. He has two beautiful runs the length of the field against Georgia Tech and one great sprint against Georgia university, to his credit that stand paramount in the minds of those who saw it whenever an Oglethorpe team is mentioned.

The other backfield position will be taken care of by Bob Kilgore, who played a great game against Tech early in the season. Kilgore has been the mainstay in the backfield of the Petrels and an able assistant to Captain Maurer.

The Petrels have a very good record for the season, with a 19-to-0 score against them in the first game of the season against Tech. The Petrels, and Wofford teams were beaten very decisively by the Petrels. Last Saturday Oglethorpe surprised the southern football followers by holding the strong Loyola team to a 13-to-13 tie. Oglethorpe was outwitted more than 14 pounds to the man, but played a great game and came out with an even break.

Reports are reaching Atlanta that the Sewanee Tigers have one of the best teams in its history and those reports are strengthened when it will be remembered that only two weeks ago the Tigers held Alabama to a 14-to-3 score, which is some feat in itself.

Both teams are in the best possible condition and are ready for the battle.

SILENT CHEER TO FOLLOW COLUMBIA

New York, October 29.—The silent cheer, never heard before at an American football game, will roll from the Columbia section of the spectators stands when Columbia team plays Cornell at Ithaca Saturday afternoon.

As the Columbia players fight to vindicate the teachings of Percy Haughton, their coach, who died suddenly Monday afternoon, the students who attend the game will keep silence as a mark of respect for Haughton's memory. It will be in keeping, too, with the almost religious intensity of purpose which will drive the team, for Columbia's players will go into the game believing that they must win to make good for their dead coach.

Cornell students will receive a hint from Columbia and probably will remain silent, too. Haughton coached for two years at Cornell before going to Harvard to establish the famous Haughton system of coaching.

The flags around the football field at Ithaca will dangle at half-mast.

CITADEL LOSES TO CAROLINA

Orangeburg, S. C., October 29.—Held scoreless for two periods, the University of South Carolina football team broke through the defense of the Citadel for touchdowns in the third and fourth periods and won today's game 14 to 3. The Citadel made its three points in the third period. It was the first time Carolina has been scored upon by a state team this season.

Madame X Reducing Girdle
Makes You Look Thin While Getting Thin

Removes 3 to 10 Inches from Waist and Hips

THE Madame X Reducing Girdle is made of scientifically treated live rubber—the same kind prescribed by famous athletic coaches for reducing purposes because of its health-bringing properties. Based on principles of "unconscious massage" that have caused reductions of 5, 10, 20 pounds. Makes you look thinner instantly. Fits as snugly, yet flexibly as a kid glove. Worn over the undergarment thru which the live rubber firmly holds the excess flesh, gently massaging it away. Its principles highly recommended by physicians. Healthiest way to reduce. The only girdle long enough to reduce the thighs.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

To Clean Bronze.

Perhaps the most satisfactory way of cleaning bronze is to first immerse the articles in boiling water and then rub with a soft cloth dipped in yellow soapuds. Polish with a dry, soft rag.

Candle Holders.

If you have no candle-holders for sonny's birthday cake, try sticking the tiny candles into marshmallows. All the small guests will be delighted when they find they can eat the candle-holders.

My Beauty Recipe

BY MARY PICKFORD, as Told to Diana Dore.

"Tight shoes and worry are the two worst foes to a woman's beauty," declared Mary Pickford. "Don't you believe it?" she queried. Her eyes mischievously mocking the pucker in which she raised her lips. "Lots of times you've seen women with that awful twisted look in their faces that comes from tight shoes. Worry does the same thing."

Mary was selecting shoes in her room. A maker of lasts was arraying his samples. Mary thrust forth her tiny foot. "Now tell me which ones to take?" she asked us. "That one? No, that's too heavy for me. This? It's too high-heeled. I don't see how I ever danced around in high heels and thought I was having a good time. Douglas and I never got dancing any more. I want some low heels. I want to do a lot of walking in them."

"That one there? Oh, no! That is 'too much shoe.' Haven't you oftentimes looked up at a woman coming down the street and said, 'Oh, here comes a hat, or 'Here comes a pair of shoes'?"

"We Americans haven't yet learned the secret the French women know—to dress so that the face is the chief thing. (Yes, I'll take the gray suede, the russet oxford, the brown satin straps.) The face should be something there worth looking at."

"The one universal rule I think for

MARY PICKFORD
"Feel friendly to people if you want to be beautiful."

being beautiful is feeling friendly to people. You become beautiful by this action and by its reflex action. When people say to me, 'Well, how can one like every one?' 'How can I like my neighbor?' I say to them, 'If your neighbor is an older woman, think of your mother, and you will have a friendlier feeling; if she is a young woman, think of your sister.'

"There is really little one can say about beauty—little, I mean, that has not been said before," she stated as she bade adieu to the shoeman and welcomed another caller.

"My recipe is quite simple—a bit old-fashioned, perhaps, and if it is, I hope you will forgive me for not being original."

"First of all, then, I believe it is necessary to establish a right line of thinking. Misspoken thoughts cannot but reflect themselves upon the face. Street makeup may erase the result for a time, but not for long. I am not a prude about makeup, but I don't think it improves a person. I would say that cleanliness of thought is even more important than cleanliness of body."

With but two more days in which to make their certified statements for registration with the secretary of state, all corporations in the state of Georgia will have to be quick in making their returns if they would escape the $50 penalty imposed by law for failure to file such information on or before November 1, the last day in which they can make such a statement, it was announced Wednesday by the secretary of state.

It is pointed out that all corporations in Georgia, both foreign and domestic, are required by law to make a certified statement for registration with the secretary of state. There are about 5,000 corporations in the state of Georgia, and to date only about 3,500 have made their returns, leaving nearly 1,500 still to be heard from, it was said.

For the first return, the fee is $1, and for annual returns thereafter, the fee falls to the secretary of state. But if this is not filed in the office of the secretary of state on or before the first day of November, corporations are placing themselves in line for a penalty of $50.

BACTERIA CULTURES SALE ON INCREASE

Remarkable increase in the sales of bacteria cultures for soil inoculation has been noted this year at the state department of agriculture. Orders for cultures are now reaching the state laboratory at the rate of over one hundred a day and are being filled as fast as chemists in charge can prepare them for shipping.

Fred Bridges, assistant commissioner of agriculture, stated Thursday that cultures for over 10,000 acres would be sold this year. Last year, he said, the total sold was about 5,000 acres while in 1922, the year before, only 1,100 acres were sold.

The department sells these cultures to such crops as alfalfa, southern blue clover, California fur clover, yellow trefoil, fengreek, white sweet clover, yellow sweet clover, bitter clover, red clover, white clover, crimson clover, berseem, shofal clover, alsike clover, rabbit foot clover, hop clover, garden pea, Canada field pea, flat pea angler pea, sweet pea, spring vetch, hairy vetch, black purple vetch, horsebean, broadbean black locust, lentil, cow peas, soy bean, garden bean, Mexican pink bean, Florida velvet bean, Lyon bean, Yokohama velvet bean, Lima bean, yellow lupine, wild lupine, Saradella, hairy lespedeza, Japan clover, peanut, chickpea Sulla, Sainfoin and beggarweed.

For the millions who suffer self-poisoning

UTO-INTOXICATION, or "self-poisoning," is robbing millions of the joy in life which they should have. In some, it shows as a feeling of weariness and lack of ambition. More pronounced cases show constipation, gas, flatulence, loss of "tone," heartburn, headache, sleeplessness, eczema, skin eruptions, dizziness, rheumatism, sallow skin, anemia, bad breath, hardening of arteries, or high blood pressure. Poisons which seep into the blood from the intestines are a cause. They are produced by harmful bacteria which must be destroyed and driven out.

If you are not feeling up to par, try CULTUR-LAC. It is a preparation containing the famous "health bacteria," which destroy dangerous disease germs.

CULTUR-LAC is also a valuable antiseptic for infected wounds or ulcers.

HUSBAND SAID WHY NOT TRY IT

Wife Said She Would. Result, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

East Hardwick, Vermont.—"Last winter I was not able to do any work at all. I had backache, headache, sideache, and was sick all the time for six months. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers, and my husband said to me, 'Why don't you try it?' So I said I would. It has done me more good than I can ever tell, and my friends say, 'What have you done to yourself?' You look so well. I tell them it is the Vegetable Compound that makes me so well and strong. There is no use to suffer with backache and pains. I will tell every one what it has done for me."—Mrs. FRED. PRIMO, Route No. 2, E. Hardwick, Vermont.

New York, October 29.—Early declines were followed by rallies in the cotton market today, but trading was less active than previously this week and the improvement was not fully maintained. January sold up from 23.20 to 23.76 and closed at 23.55, the general market closing steady at net advances of 1/4 to 1/2 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 to 10 points and active months sold about 20 to 25 points net lower in the early trading. The week's trading was characterized by a reaction, the latter was encouraged by relatively easy Liverpool cables and a favorable interpretation of the weekly report of the weather bureau. Trade interests were buyers on a scale-down, however, and after easing off to 23.15 for December and 23.60 for March, the market steadied on reports of steady spot markets in the eastern belt, expectations of large exports for the balance of the week and reports that comparatively few hedging orders are reaching here from the south.

December rallied to 23.61 and March to 24.05 on covering, or buying by early sellers, but the demand failed to broaden and after trading off to 23.55 for December and 23.60 for March, the market eased back to about yesterday's closing quotations. Much of the day's trading was attributed to the evening-up of scattered orders for cotton for delivery in the eastern belt, which was a good part of the selling early was due to expectations of a reaction after the sharp advances of the last two days. The late set back was accompanied by reports that spot demand was less active in the eastern belt with the basis a shade easier and the southwest was credited with selling.

Liverpool cables reported a poor situation according to more favorable crop news and that the ceiling had been off by hedge selling.

EARLY GAINS
LOST AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, October 29.—The cotton market again showed an advancing tendency today notwithstanding heavy weather and a heavy crop report and less favorable weather advice, many interior markets reporting an easier basis. During the afternoon prices gained 24 to 28 points over the closing levels of yesterday mainly on the favorable news from the British colonies, but lost some of the gain during the afternoon, closing only one point higher at 24.20. December and seven points up on January.

Liverpool cables were easier than due, but despite that the market opened steady and unchanged. After the opening call prices eased off owing to the weekly weather and crop report proving more favorable than expected. Prices soon rallied 44 to 45 points up from the early low, but a good part of the gain was lost during the afternoon, the close showing net gains for the day of four to nine points.

The weekly weather and crop report was somewhat of a surprise because while it admitted the weather was killing frosts had visited nearly the whole of the northern belt it stated that no damage had been done.

The afternoon reaction was due largely to liquidation and to selling of December spot interests and news of a lower crop in the interior. Total exports for the day reached 34,243 bales, of which 14,898 bales were cleared to Japan from the Pacific coast.

Red Riding Hood

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS.
Mrs. Morgan Schuyler, one of New York's leading philanthropic and social lights, advertises for a young woman to work in her apartment mornings. The advertisement is answered by a girl evidently of birth and breeding. In spite of the fact that she admits a desire to hide her identity, Mrs. Schuyler accepts her on trust and tags her with the name of Hope Emerson.
Mrs. Schuyler's family consists of her mother, Mrs. Van Dorn; a young brother, Jim Van Dorn, and an older brother, Bertie, who is away.
The second morning of her employment, Hope faints after receiving a mysterious telephone call. Mrs. Schuyler summons Dr. Horace Osborne. Hope tells the doctor that she is employed during the afternoon hours on East Seventieth street. The doctor offers to drive her there. By a strange coincidence the doctor has an appointment at the house where Hope is employed. He has been called in consultation with two other doctors. The patient is a boy of five years, about whom the entire household mysteriously revolves; the closest guardian is an uncle named Scarwenka. All of the members of this household are foreigners except Hope, who knows some English. A day or two later a visitor, Colonel Van Saanen, a man of obvious importance, calls at the Seventieth street house. Hope distrusts him and she learns that Scarwenka does also. Van Saanen tells Scarwenka that he is going to take the boy away that night. Hope decides to call on Dr. Osborne for help. He accompanies her to the house on East Seventieth street, where the two conspirators find Van Saanen there before them. By a trick the colonel locks Hope and the doctor in the room with the child. Dr. Osborne and Hope escape through the window and take the child to a hospital. The doctor drives Hope from the hospital.

INSTALLMENT XL.

ROMANCE TOUCHES DR. OSBORNE.

Hope's tone was soothing, even maternal, but Dr. Osborne refused to be soothed. He looked at her with an annoyance that grew into resentment when he saw her lips twitch into an unwilling smile.
"Look here," he anxiously inquired, "are you planning to marry me?"

She stopped smiling.

"No," she said, and there was a cold finality in the tone and word;

"Are you planning to marry me?"

but he refused to be impressed by it. Instead he gave her a smile that reflected a sudden inner radiance.

"What's the use of denying it? You've made up your mind that I'll do, and you know you have."

As if she felt that she had taken him too seriously, she again gave him the unwilling little smile that so engagingly twitched her short upper lip. "There aren't many certainties in this uncertain world, but one of the certainties is that you and I will not marry each other. As the advertisement says, 'There's a reason.' Does that make you feel better?"

"No," he grumpily admitted, "it doesn't."
"You're hard to please. But it will. As you ride uptown you'll be conscious of a mounting elation, and after breakfast tomorrow morning you'll be tempted to call me on the telephone and thank me. But don't do it. I shall understand."

"You understand a darned sight too much," the doctor muttered. Then, meeting her eyes, he unwillingly grinned.
"There's something awfully nice about you," she thoughtfully admitted. "I begin to understand why the nurses follow you around with your rubbers and ear-muffs. One of them will lead you to the altar some day when you're off your guard. There are women who have no scruples."

He seized her hand.
"Don't make fun of me! You know I—I feel strongly about this! It's got me!"

She laughed, and the laugh was the low gurgle that had appealed to Mrs. Schuyler. The limousine stopped in front of the Schuyler apartment house.

"Good-night," Hope released her hand and spoke in a cheerful matter-of-fact tone. "Thank you again for all you've done." Her brown eyes danced as she looked at him. "Tomorrow you'll be drawing long deep breaths of relief!"
This time he got out of the limousine to help her to descend. It seemed the least he could do after their up-to-date dialogue. He did not reply to her valedictory, but reluctantly grinned again as he raised his hat and watched her pass through the wide entrance of the building and into a waiting elevator. How wonderful her eyes had looked with that dancing light in them! And what a pulling quality there had been in her voice when she warned him of the ephemeral nature of his passion.

He sighed. She was right, of course, and wise, like all these modern girls. Already, now that she was gone, now that the modulations of her voice had ceased to quiver in the air around him, he was conscious of the chill advance of a reaction. Just what had he been saying to her? Odd how willing a man was to make an ass of himself when a woman gave him an opportunity, or even when she didn't. All Osborne could hope was that he perhaps did it more rarely than most men.

"Home, sir?" Riley ventured to ask.
Osborne shot a suspicious look at him. Was the fellow grinning? But Riley's face was expressionless. His employer muttered something, got back into the limousine, and slammed himself down into his corner. The reflection that the car seemed appallingly empty was banished before it fully entered his mind. For a few short moments he had been the companion of Romance, had felt the sweep of its mighty wings; but now it was chill reality that he summoned to sit beside him in the vacant seat.

His thoughts took up the program of the next day—a very full day it would be, he remembered. Hospital visits, half a dozen consultations, a score of patients to see, all expecting him "early"—Mrs. Ransome, for example. By Jove, he ought to have looked in on Mrs. Ransome to-night. He hadn't liked her symptoms at all this morning, and the telephoned report at 6 o'clock had not been reassuring. He'd just drop in to see her now, on his way uptown.

He seized the speaking tube and gave the order to the stricken Riley, who had been hoping to get home in time for a rendezvous with the waitress. And Romance, which had wistfully lingered even after her dismissal, slowly faded into the past and faded out. She knew better than to waste more time on Osborne tonight. What chance had Romance against the life work of a worker who is in love with his job?

"You look tired this morning," Mrs. Schuyler commented. "Were you late again last night?"
Her tone was sympathetic. She had made a good breakfast, her first meal had been less irritating than usual, and on the previous day she had succeeded in getting some work out of two committee members no other chairman had ever before galvanized into action. Her heart was full of kindness.

"Not very late. It was about half-past ten, I think, when I came in."
"I asked, because Sally spent most of the evening trying to get you on the telephone," Mrs. Schuyler continued. She slipped a paper knife under the flap of an envelope topped a pile of letters she evidently considered unimportant, for she had put them to one side in her originally severe scrutiny of the general aspect of her correspondence.

"There's something the matter with the child," she went on, turning an eye on the sheet she drew from the envelope. "She was as flippant as usual, but I got the impression that she was worried. Not that there's anything surprising in that. Sally's always in messes of some sort, and if she gives you an opportunity to help her out of them instead of shrieking for me, it will be a great relief—Good heavens!"

She stopped, looked blankly at the typewritten sheet of paper in her hand, retrieved the envelope, and examined its superscription, and then, returning to the letter itself, reread it with an attention which, for the moment at least, eliminated all other interests.

Hope took up the tray and left the room. She had a feeling that the letter in some way concerned her, and that if she remained she might experience one of those embarrassing flashes of intuition or telepathy to which she was subject. Her burden left on the dining-room table, ready for Kawa, she was glad the next obvious duty was to see if Mrs. Van Dorn was also prepared to relinquish her tray.

She liked Mrs. Schuyler's mother, and apparently the liking was reciprocated, for the old lady, sitting up in bed in a lavender silk jacket and a lavender-trimmed lace cap that lent beauty to the morning, with her tray balanced against her round little stomach, greeted her reappearance with a chirp of welcome. Her wrinkled face took on an expression of great caution and she almost whispered her next words:

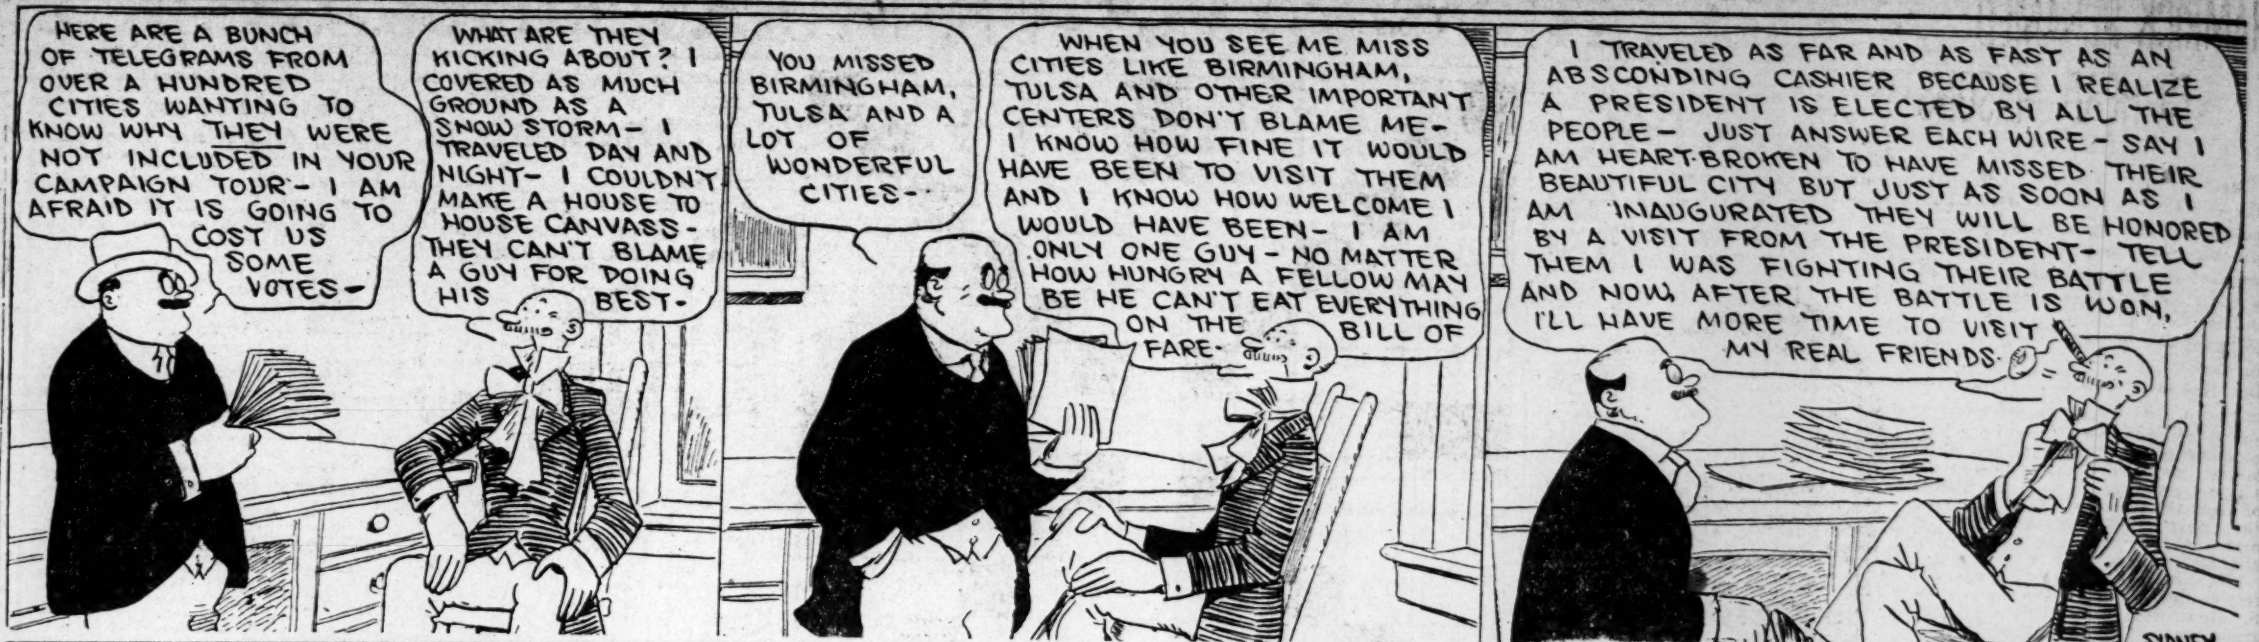

"Sally wants to talk to you."

Hope spoke without enthusiasm. Not even her hot bath had made her sleep, and she was experiencing a sense of depression that was the natural aftermath of a restless night. She was worried about the Tartar, humiliated by the memory of the trouble she had caused Osborne, and still uncertain as to her course in connection with the East Seventieth street house. Indeed, the problem of the next step in this little matter had set on her pillow gibbering into her ear until the inquisitive dawn leered into her room. Now she found herself inquisitively wishing that Mrs. Van Dorn would attend to her own affairs. It was rather too much to have the job of being guide, philosopher and friend of the flapper added to the other exacting tasks in this household.

Nevertheless, she would help Sally if she could. That went without saying. She was always trying to eliminate obligations to others, yet always acknowledging and meeting them, and, in the end, finding comfort in giving such help.

MAXSON FUKHAL JUDELL

FEET OF CLAY.

By Willis M. Barnes.

In grammar or geography
And in arithmetic
My little son would come to me
When anything would stick.
Throughout his grades I helped him

With all his problems, till
Within his mind there was no doubt
I was a man of skill.

But High School's proved my Waterloo.
With teardrops in his eyes
He came and asked me what to do
With x's and with y's.

I'm really sorry for the lad,
For now he's learned of me
That algebra has proved his Dad
An unknown quantity.

FORET.

Nurse: "It's a boy."
Confirmed Golfer: "Hurray! A caddy!"

Costly Fun.

First Fair Movie Fan: "I believe I could watch slow motion pictures all day."
Second Movie Fan: "I thought so, too, until I had a plumber in the house."
—Gertrude Marie Heller.

Knew the Symptoms.

Helen: "Oh, I think football must be a wonderfully exciting game."
Irene: "What college team does he play on, dear?"
—D. W. Hanks.

Looks Bad.

Her Mother: "What makes you so sure that Jack's love is growing cold, my dear?"
Mrs. Newbridge (in tears): "This morning, before he left for the office, he forgot to remind me how pretty I was."
—Mrs. Charles Reichenbaum.

It isn't a question of voting a "straight" ticket, this election. The average voter is trying to pick out a "straight" party.

After Seeing a Mystery Play. As a mystery play, 'twas hard to beat. I readily will agree; For how they get three dollars a seat, Is a mystery to me.
—K. J. E.

This Is What Love Does.

It was one of those rare but not altogether extinct times when a man and his wife were holding a love-making conversation reminiscent of the good old days before the war. As is usual with women when in a tender mood, the deficiencies were forgotten for the moment and she was actually speaking well of him, strange and improbably as it may seem. "Go on," he remarked teasingly, "if I were to die tomorrow you'd marry again in no time."
She wheeled from the gas range and said in a voice trembling with emotion: "I wouldn't wipe my feet on the best man who ever lived, except you." And he went back to his work feeling real happy.
—Walter M. Brown.

THE EDITOR'S GOSSIP SHOP.

"Please explain," writes N. M. Cook, "what you mean by your request that the name of this paper should appear on all contributions."

There are innumerable ways in which a contribution can be lost or misplaced—it must be remembered that we—this newspaper—get other letters outside of Fun Shop contributions.

Therefore, if you put your name and address and the name of our newspaper on each article or contribution you write, we have a means of identification which will prevent what you send is being lost, and insuring prompt attention to what you write.

Last month five checks came back to us because the address put on the accepted contributions were carelessly written.

Her Failure.

"Poor Daphne," sympathetically said Heloise, of the Rapid Fire restaurant. "She married that fellow to reform him."
"Did it work?" returned Claudine, of the same establishment.
"Nah! Look how bowlegged he is!"

You Can't Please 'Em. Stanley: "I will do anything for you that you ask."

Marion: "But I want a man who has originality enough to do something without being asked."
—J. Willard Ridings.

Kidding Your Editor.

"Here's a joke," The editor of The Fun Shop paid me for this.
"What's the joke?"
"It's on him."
—W. S.

A Kitchen Name.

Mrs. Bell: "Are you a good cook?"
Applicant: "Why, ma'am, my name is Fanny."
—E. G. Clark.

A Finishing School for Dad.

Friend: "It must come high to send a son away to college."
Dad: "Yes, that's why they call it higher education."
—Mrs. L. H. Frost.

Readers are invited to contribute. All humor—epigrams (or humorous mottoes), jokes, anecdotes, poetry, burlesque, satires and bright sayings of children—must be original and hitherto unpublished. Accepted material will be paid for at the rate of $1 to $10 per contribution and from 25 cents to $1 per line for poetry according to its character and value in the judgment of the editor. Unaccepted contributions cannot be returned. All manuscripts must be written on one side of the paper only and should be addressed The Constitution Fun Shop Headquarters, 8 West 40th Street, New York City.
